FOREWORD.

On the 1st August, 1914, the Corps Establishment was one squadron of Cavalry and three Companies of Infantry, in all 424 officers and men. Its actual strength was 268.

On the 22nd September, 1914, its Infantry Establishment was increased to eight Companies of Infantry, making four double companies; and in August, 1915, to six double companies. Its actual strength on the 1st March, 1915, was 1,083; on the 1st January, 1916, 4,008. By the end of the war 13,800 men had passed through its ranks, of whom between 11,000 and 12,000 had received commissions.

The total number of men killed was 2,100, of wounded 5,000. The honours gained were about 2,800, including three Victoria Crosses.

Although no actual record was kept, it is calculated that some 130,000 candidates were interviewed by the Corps Selection Committees, about one in ten being accepted.

PREFACE.

It is hoped that this history of the Inns of Court O.T.C. during the War may be of interest not only to the men who passed through its ranks, but to a wider circle.

The prominence given to the first two years is not entirely due to egotism on the part of the Editor. The right training of officers is of supreme public importance. Soldiers' battles, such as the first battle of Ypres, may still be incidents of war, but, on the whole, modern war tends more and more to become a fight between officers. Notwithstanding the huge bulk of a modern army, the unit, such as the Battalion, or even the Company, is becoming more and more complete in itself, and the character and brains of the platoon commander on the one side are pitted against the character and brains of the platoon commander on the other side. All will probably agree that the primary object of an officer's training is the building up of his character in the direction of self-control, self-reliance, and action: It is also obvious that methods may differ according to the average age of the men with whom you are dealing, and the time at your disposal. Speaking generally, however, such methods are either positive or negative: they either encourage and seek to develop what is good, or they repress, and try to eradicate what is bad: for the one, discipline, in the sense of strict obedience, is a means; for the other, it is an end. During the first two years the Corps continued the first method, which it had pursued, so far as peace conditions allowed, since its establishment as an Officers' Training Corps in 1909; during the remainder of the War, it had gradually to change into the second method, being that adopted by the Cadet units established in 1916 under the directions of the War Office. The last method may be called the Sandhurst method, and is a familiar one: the first method is less familiar, and is therefore treated here at greater length.

The Editor has been much assisted in the compiling of this work by a committee of ex-members of the Corps. The record of the Corps contained in the Appendices has been very difficult to check, and he will be much obliged by the correction of any errors or omissions.

He takes this opportunity to acknowledge his great indebtedness to Major Sir Frederic Kenyon, K.C.B., for wise counsel, and most loyal co-operation, both in connection with this work, and during the whole period of his command.

The thanks of the Corps are due to its former R.Q.M.S., A. Langridge, who initiated the keeping of the records of the men passing through its ranks—one of the many services he has rendered to the Corps, of whose traditions he has always been the stout upholder, and zealous guardian; also to Mr. H. F. Wallis, an ex-member: without his untiring industry the records could hardly have been completed.

The photographs, other than the frontispiece, are by Mr. Newman, the well known photographer at Berkhamsted.

The book can be obtained on application to 10, Stone Buildings, Lincoln's Inn.

Chapter I.

THE CORPS (AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER, 1914).

On Sunday, the 2nd August, 1914, the Corps, with a strength of 230, left London at 7.55 a.m. for Perham Down, Salisbury Plain, for its annual fourteen days' training, with the rest of the 4th London Infantry Brigade (the Grey Brigade). Colonel F. J. Heyworth, D.S.O. (Scots Guards) commanded the Brigade, and Major General C. C. Monro, C.B., the 2nd (London) Division, of which the Brigade formed part. We had all expected the training to be cancelled, and the camp was full of rumours. In the afternoon, the Brigadier had a look round, and told me he thought it quite possible we should be ordered back to London; but time passed, and nothing happened. About 11.15 p.m. I heard the rush of a motor-cycle up to the Orderly Room, and a few moments later, the adjutant, Captain Rainsford-Hannay, came to my tent with a field message, signed by the Brigade Major, ordering us to be at the station ready to leave for London by 12.30 a.m. At the psychological moment my electric lamp gave out, and I had to dress slowly and impatiently in the dark; but Rainsford-Hannay was everywhere, and thanks to his boundless energy, and the strenuous efforts of all concerned, we were able to leave camp at midnight with kits packed, and to be at the station by 12.15. Then followed the first of many long waits. The men dozed off, mostly on the ground, and we did not entrain till 3.15 a.m., getting to Addison Road at 5.30 a.m. Thence we marched to our Headquarters at Lincoln's Inn, along deserted streets in the beautiful summer morning, and dispersed to search for breakfast, the First Avenue Hotel being the favourite rendezvous.

3rd August.—Expecting the order for the embodiment of the Territorial Force could not be long delayed, we dismissed the men with orders to hold themselves in readiness to rejoin at any moment.

That day we waited anxiously for the rush of recruits the prospect of war should bring in, and were surprised when only six presented themselves. The public evidently required reminding of our existence, and accordingly I wrote a letter to the papers, and the recruiting result was immediate.

4th and 5th August.—Late on the 4th we received the order for the embodiment of the Territorial Force, and during these two days 213 recruits were enlisted. They were handed over to Major Hay, who took charge of all recruits, with Lieutenant A. G. Mathews from the Reserve to help him, and Sergt. C. T. A. Pollock as chief instructor. On the 5th, Kenyon, McLean, Holland, and Gray, who had volunteered for censoring work with the Expeditionary Force, left for Southampton. An urgent appeal for censors had been sent out by the War Office, and the immediate response by these officers had brought me the following letter:—

“WAR OFFICE,
WHITEHALL, S.W.
31st July, 1914.

“MY DEAR COLONEL ERRINGTON,

I should like to thank you and congratulate you on the very prompt manner in which your officers have come forward to volunteer for the duties of Press Censor, if required.

It must be very satisfactory to know your Battalion is so patriotic, and I have written to each individual officer to thank them.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) E. BETHUNE,
Director General Territorial Forces.”

Kenyon was recalled in September, 1914, and McLean returned in March, 1915; both greatly to our advantage. Holland and Gray remained with the Expeditionary Force till the end of the war. Both gained the D.S.O., and Holland finished as Lt.-Colonel, and Gray as Major. Two other of our officers, Captain H. B. Butler and H. W. Malkin, could not be spared by their respective Government Departments, and much against their will were unable to join up.

In the meantime a vital question was exercising my mind affecting the very existence of the Corps. It was by no means clear on our regulations whether we were entitled to survive embodiment at all, and ought not rather to be utilised at once as officers wherever wanted.

This question involved the further practical one of the right to pay and allowances. Fortunately we were in the unique position, so far as Officers' Training Corps were concerned, that we formed part of the Territorial Force, and our men were all sworn in as ordinary privates; perhaps more fortunately still, no copy of our Regulations could be found, and weary officers at the War Office were not inclined to grapple with points of construction. There was no question we formed part of the Territorial Force, and the necessary authority was given us to issue pay and allowances accordingly, “so with a heart at great ease to bed.”

THE CORPS (AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER, 1914).

- 6th August.—Our recruits had brought us well over establishment, and by this time we had a waiting list of 237, of whom 30 per cent. had previous training. Old and tried members of the Corps had flocked to the Orderly Room, clamouring to help; and we placed an old "C" Company man, P. F. Warner (famous in another field) in charge, with P. M. Walters, formerly "E" Company, and H. C. Gutteridge, formerly "C" Company, to assist. J. P. Somers, a well-known Bisley shot, instructed in musketry, until called away to the School of Musketry at Bisley, which was for some time practically run by old Inns of Court men, including Hopkins, Barber (M.C.), Stone, (afterwards killed as a Lt.-Colonel and D.S.O.), and Biddle.
- 7th, 8th, and 9th August.—We had by this time organised the day's work. Drills were from 10 a.m. to 12.30 and from 2 to 4. The Squadron and Companies carried on in drill and musketry in Lincoln's Inn and the Temple Gardens, the waiting list generally in Gray's Inn. In wet weather, by leave of the Benchers, we were at liberty to use all the Halls, and, in addition, Lincoln's Inn both then, and later, placed at our disposition as many sets of chambers as we required. Not only were these facilities of immense assistance in organisation, but for the first two years all recruits started with some weeks' training at Headquarters, which were used as a recruits' dépôt. In touch with these historical surroundings they took a common pride in the old home of the Corps, and so came the first quickening of that mysterious tie, that invincible esprit de corps, which binds and always has bound our men so closely together.
- 10th August.—Our honorary Colonel, Field-Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, came in unexpectedly, and saw the Squadron and "B" Company in the Temple Gardens. He said a few words to them, and the same day I received the following card from him:—
- " UNITED SERVICE CLUB,
PALL MALL, S.W.
August 10th, 1914.
- " MY DEAR COLONEL,
I am delighted to hear of the Recruiting. I saw a very good stamp to-day in the Gardens.
Yours sincerely,
(Signed) EVELYN WOOD."
- A significant departure from pre-war procedure appeared at this time in the shape of an advertisement in "The Times," and other papers, for 2,000 junior officers for temporary commissions in the Army. I at once went to the War Office to ask why we had not been applied to, and found our existence had been overlooked. I was assured, however, that any names we sent in would have priority.
- 11th August.—In order to vary the work and improve the training, the Squadron and Companies now went on certain days in the week to Wimbledon or Richmond. Thanks to Mr. Hunt, an American gentleman, who placed his car at our disposal, I was able to keep in touch with everything going on.
- 12th August.—The Lord Chancellor, Lord Haldane, came down, and saw the Companies and the recruits at Lincoln's Inn, and addressed them. It was very much in my mind to get the Corps out of London as soon as possible, and he was good enough to say he would speak to Lord Kitchener on the subject. I shortly afterwards heard from him that Lord Kitchener had given instructions to the D.M.T. to communicate with us at once, and although some time elapsed before we got away, Lord Haldane's action gave the first push in that direction. I had occasion to consult him on several subsequent occasions, and he invariably gave the Corps his warm support. It was, of course, to his organising ability that the Officers' Training Corps first owed their existence. Lord Reading was also always ready to help.
- 14th August.—Our first two commissions came along with Corpl. E. S. Atkin and Lce.-Corpl. K. B. Dickson.
- 15th August.—Dr. McGuire lectured on the general situation in Lincoln's Inn Hall. We were at this time giving intensive training under the Adjutant to men going to the Special Reserve, and they spent all this (Saturday) afternoon and Sunday on map-reading and other subjects.
- 17th August.—On this day 74 commissions in the Special Reserve came in.
- 19th August.—Nineteen men were gazetted, mainly to the Special Reserve.
- 21st August.—I received a message from the War Office asking that, if possible, the Corps should go to the Intercession Service at St. Paul's. We paraded both Corps and Waiting List at 7 p.m. The service commenced at 8 p.m., and lasted for about an hour; the band of the Scots Guards was present, and we were the only formed body of troops. It was an impressive service, and I said a few words to the men before dismissing them at Lincoln's Inn at 9.30 p.m.
- 23rd August.—Although Sunday, all the men ripe for commissions came to lectures by the Adjutant, on map-reading, and on various subjects dealing with regimental economy.
- 25th August.—Having regard to the continuous rush of would-be recruits who were swelling our Waiting List, an increase in our establishment was becoming urgently necessary. In the afternoon I saw Sir Francis Lloyd, commanding the London district, who promised to push our application.
- 26th August.—Having obtained leave to use Regents Park after closing time, we had a useful night exercise there from 8.30 to 10.30 p.m., the Infantry Companies, under O'Brien, assaulting a position held by the Squadron.

THE CORPS (AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER, 1914).

27th August.—The squadron had by this time managed to obtain privately a certain number of horses at Wimbledon, and could do some mounted training. The Waiting List, now 560 strong, formed three Companies: No. 1 under F. P. Lefroy, No. 2 under P. M. Walters, and No. 3 under Sergt. Fraley. The last-named was one of our regular staff-sergeants, who came back to help. Lefroy was a great discovery. He had recently been in the sappers, but having injured himself in some sports, he had been invalided out. With an almost baby face, he was one of the smartest youngsters I have met. Like so many others, he had drifted into our Orderly Room to ask if he could help. Shortly afterwards he joined the Corps, got a commission, and afterwards commanded "D" Co. at Berkhamsted. In 1915 he transferred back to the R.E., and was subsequently killed.

31st August.—I heard from the London District that our camp was sanctioned, and would probably be at Epping. The locality did not sound a favourable one, and, having accidentally learnt that Hatfield Park might be available, I wrote to Lord Salisbury for leave to go there.

1st September.—Lord Salisbury wired his permission to use Hatfield Park.

By this date the Corps had obtained 150 commissions.

3rd September.—Hannay and I were sent for to M.T.3 at the War Office, and were asked if the Corps could supply officers for Kitchener's Army, who, in the dearth of capable N.C.O.'s would be able to carry on without them (a serious innovation!). We promised 100 almost at once. On returning to Lincoln's Inn, we selected 111 men, who, although the conditions of service were altogether vague, at once volunteered for the job. We immediately started giving these men special training by the Adjutant, and this was the beginning of the Special Instruction Class, which continued to play such a prominent part in our system of training.

4th September.—Having heard from Lord Salisbury, that although he was quite willing we should camp in Hatfield Park, it was already very crowded, and that we might find Ashridge Park more suitable, I wrote to Lord Brownlow accordingly.

7th September.—I received a wire suggesting we should look at the proposed site in Ashridge Park, and the Adjutant went down in Hunt's car. He came back with a suggestion by Lord Brownlow, to which he agreed, that a site near the station would be better. Lord Brownlow also wrote that though he was willing to give us every facility for camping in the Park, the water supply was very deficient, and transport would have three miles of hilly road. He recommended a field close to the station, where the Yeomanry had often camped. We adopted the suggestion at once, and applied for authority to move to Berkhamsted.

9th September.—Moore, who had been acting as an A.D.C., came back, and took over the Squadron from Wood Hill. A little later he left us with Robinson for the East Riding Yeomanry, getting command of a squadron at once. He afterwards gained the D.S.O., and Robinson the M.C. Ninety-five commissions in Kitchener's Army came along.

14th September.—At last we received permission to go into camp at Berkhamsted—for six weeks—from the 28th! We then started clamouring for horses for the Squadron. Squadron Q.M.S. Porter had been down to Berkhamsted, and had discovered an almost derelict brewery, the use of which could be obtained on very reasonable terms.

We were eventually able to stable the whole of the squadron horses, and billet the greater part of the Squadron men there, with the greatest advantage from the point of view of both horsemastership and discipline. General Bethune stood our friend over the horses, and we obtained them early in October.

From this time onward, we received increasingly urgent direct applications from various units for officers. They began with a request from the Post Office Rifles for eight officer instructors for their 2nd Battalion, then one for sixteen officers from the Kensington Battalion of K.1, as the new Army was familiarly called. Then four captains for the Salford Battalion of K.2. The new units of the K.R.R. and the Rifle Brigade asked for five each. Units we had already supplied, like the South Wales Borderers, asked for more; and one of the new Brigades wanted forty.

23rd September.—On this day our Infantry Establishment was increased to eight Companies, and the Squadron to war strength. The new Companies were lettered D, E, F, H, K. A little later we reformed the eight single Companies into four double Companies, numbered 1, 2, 3, and 4.

25th September.—Our advance party proceeded to camp.

28th September.—On this day the Corps moved to Berkhamsted, nominally for a six weeks' camp, really for the period of the war. The new Companies, composed of recruits, were left in London, our previous Headquarters now becoming our dépôt, with Major Hay in command.

The Corps marching into Berkhamsted included:—

Lt.-Col. F. H. L. Errington, V.D., Commanding.

Major C. W. Mead, T.D., Second-in-Command.

Capt. J. Rainsford-Hannay, The Queen's Regiment, Adjutant.

THE SQUADRON:—

Although anxious for every reason to get to camp, our enforced sojourn in London had not been without its uses. By the time we left, it was possible to see clearly certain facts on which our future Corps policy would have to be based. In the first place, the casualties in the Army were already very heavy, and having regard to the raising of the new Army, and the increase of the Territorial Force, the demand for officers was certain to become enormous. In the second place, so far from attempting to establish any reserve of men qualified for officers, suitable men, particularly from the universities and public schools, were being allowed, and even encouraged, to join the ranks. The Corps was practically the only training establishment actually functioning; and while, on the one hand, the good material was going to waste, on the other, commissions were being granted through all sorts of agencies, and regardless of any sort of qualification. Again and again we were rung up by the War Office, saying they must have 300, or 400, or 500 officers by the end of the week, and could we not send 100 or so. Our invariable answer was that we would send those we considered sufficiently trained, but no more. It was also apparent that any idea of training an officer after he had received a commission was doomed to failure. An attempt was made in the shape of young officers' companies: it was soon found, however, that they did not really answer the purpose. Plainly, therefore, for some time to come, the Corps would be the only school for training.

From the point of view of material resources, we had many deficiencies. Our equipment was the old Slade-Wallace, so old, that in many cases it had to be held together by string. In the way of rifles, we had a stroke of luck. On the increase of establishment, we received 800 additional rifles, probably by mistake, as their delivery was almost immediately followed by an order to return them. This we resisted, and finally compromised by returning 400. We were then left with 800 rifles and 100 carbines. We had an old Maxim machine gun; no stock of uniforms, practically no transport.

From the moral point of view, however, we were more fortunate. Ever since 1908, and in many ways before that date, we had been training men as officers, and men of the class and age then coming in, mainly 25 to 35; and in this respect we alone had the necessary experience. The Corps had in its ranks an inexhaustible supply of men admirably qualified by character, brains, and physical fitness, to instruct or train. We had, in fact, been preparing for the emergency which had actually arisen, though not knowing whether it would arise in our time or not. Above all, we were a long established unit with high traditions of self-sacrificing duty, and vibrating through and through with esprit de corps. The instrument was in essentials there: it only remained to consider the lines on which the training should proceed.

The Sandhurst system of putting boys under the harrow, so as to enable the good seed to be sown in their future regiments was unthinkable when dealing with older men of considerable knowledge of the world, and whose critical faculties were developed; nor was there time for such leisurely training, nor, when they joined their regiments, would the new officers find the old regimental atmosphere, or the time to learn their duties. The period of training was not likely to exceed three or four months, and to spend it on the barrack square would be a crude absurdity. Success could only come from determining the most essential quality in an officer, and concentrating on its development. That quality is undoubtedly moral, which in the case of an officer is almost synonymous with character; and our foremost object became to build up character by the strictest discipline, by encouraging keenness, and every civilian qualification that went to support it, and by stimulating in every way esprit de platoon, esprit de company, and esprit de corps.

In all seasons, in all weathers, at all times of the day and night, our men were over the country; except for musketry, and the minimum amount of close order drill, they were never in camp. They rapidly became hardy and self-reliant: the Infantry always exercising with packs on, could march eight or ten miles, have a long tactical exercise, march the same distance back, and simply regard it as in the day's work. Beyond all, they had the example of their officers: always cheerful and ready to lend a hand, friendly counsellors without familiarity, able every time to do a little bit more than the men, setting a magnificent example of discipline and lightning obedience, not only to an order, but to the slightest suggestion from their C.O.

We were equally fortunate in our Squadron and Company Sergeant Majors and Quartermaster-Sergeants—they had mostly long service, and were devoted to the Corps. Imbued with its traditions, they were the heart and soul of its regimental life: socially and by education they were of the same class as the officers, of whom they were the personal friends. They could have taken commissions if they had liked, but being now above the age for active service abroad, they voluntarily remained in the non-commissioned ranks, where they could do invaluable service by instilling into recruits the traditions of the Corps. Resourceful with a wide experience of men and matters, ready to shoulder responsibility, humorous and tactful, but standing no nonsense, and quick to detect any sign of shirking, while able to distinguish between the real and the improveable wrong-un, they could always get the last ounce out of their men. It was mainly due to them that during the whole period of my command, though thousands of men passed through our hands, men of all ages from 18 to 35, coming from all corners of the world, of every possible profession and business, not only was the strictest discipline unquestioned, but any form of obstruction was absolutely unknown. Keeness was and remained the predominant note.

Chapter II.

THE CORPS AT BERKHAMSTED.

The situation of our camp at Berkhamsted was an ideal one, pitched in the field on the north side of the station and sloping gently up to Berkhamsted Place. The Squadron, both men and horses, were in the Brewery. Lord Brownlow placed at our disposal his private waiting-room at the station and also a covered-in shelter, both of which were used for the Quartermaster's office and stores. The proximity of the station did away with all transport difficulties. On the west side we had ample room for expansion, and on the east side another large field, subsequently given the name of "Kitchener's Field," made an admirable drill ground.

The surrounding country was the best imaginable for training, so varied, that during my period of command, although we had a battalion tactical exercise first twice, and then once every week, we never had to repeat the same exercise. To the north lay the big common, later intersected by some 13,000 yards of trenches, then Ashridge Park, undulating and beautifully timbered, placed entirely at our disposal by Lord Brownlow, and so away to the open downland of the Chiltern Hills. To the south, hilly and enclosed land leading to Hawridge and Cholesbury Commons. To the east, farms and enclosures admirably adapted for night operations; and to the west the private grounds of Rossway and Champneys, always open to us, woods and farms and enclosures to and beyond Tring. We went where we liked, and did what we liked. The big landowner, the small landowner, and the farmer were all equally ready to help. If there was any trouble, Major Mead at once got on his horse, rode over, and smoothed it down.

For the squadron, long treks without touching a road, wide movements, distant reconnaissance; for the infantry, wood-fighting, canal crossings, river crossings, big fights on the open commons or downs, local fighting among the enclosures, every form of open training was available. In the neighbouring villages, Nettleden, Little Gaddesden, Aldbury, Ashley Green, Bovingdon, the awakened villager turned to sleep again with greater security when he realised that the outburst of firing, and the swift rush of feet through the village street, betokened nothing more than a night raid of the Devil's Own.

During the greater part of the week the squadron and companies were left in the hands of their commanders, with an absolutely free hand, bearing in mind only the ultimate object: that a man should leave the Corps with a firm foundation of self-reliance and discipline, and sufficient knowledge of drill, musketry, and map-reading, and some knowledge of the Lewis gun (when that new instrument of war had been invented), and of entrenching. Later we were practically forced to add an exaggerated amount of physical exercise, bayonet fighting, and bombing. On the Friday and Saturday morning there was an hour's Battalion drill; and it is a striking proof of how far keenness, intelligence, and sound company training will supplement practice, that after some 35 years of experience of every kind of drill, I have never seen any regular regiment move with greater steadiness, or with so admirable a combination of precision and promptitude as the Battalion, 2,000 strong, drilling in Kitchener's Field in the spring of 1916. During the first year we had two battalion tactical exercises a week, after that one. In the daytime, it is impossible to reproduce war conditions; but there are certain war essentials which can be practised, and those we thought most necessary for infantry officers were the keeping up of connection, use of ground, continuous flank protection, and real weight in the attack. No intricate schemes, or formal appreciations, or orders, were given out in advance. Some half an hour or so before the start, the commander of each side got the "idea" which he had to carry out. There were no boundaries, no mid-day halt for lunch, the exercise went on until it had reached its limit of usefulness. At the end of the exercise, either in the field, or on arrival back in camp, all the Officers and N.C.O.'s were assembled for a discussion on the operation, and the necessary tactical lessons pointed out. A precisely similar course was adopted with regard to night operations, which took place for the Battalion on Friday nights, and for the Companies on one or two other nights in the week. Great stress was laid on these, not only because of the necessity for movements at night, but also because at night the conditions approximate more closely to the conditions of war: they involve the same nerve atmosphere, the same slowness of movement and absolute boredom, and form the same test of watchfulness and vitality. Our rule was absolute silence in the ranks from start to finish, and this was in itself a useful lesson in discipline. Here again there was no limit of time, and one or two o'clock in the morning was no infrequent hour for the return.

In both the day and night exercises every officer commanded in rotation, and frequently the N.C.O.'s were put in entire charge.

Not only were our training facilities at Berkhamsted of the first order, but our domestic requirements were met in an equally satisfactory manner. Before coming down, I received an offer from Mr. A. J. Ram, K.C., to put up four officers and their horses at Berkhamsted Place, almost in the camp; and some of us billeted with him during the whole period of the war. Our men were made equally welcome everywhere, and we shall never forget the hospitable kindness shown by the people of the town. As soon as we moved into billets, the Rector, Mr. Hart Davies, placed the Court House at our disposal for an Orderly Room, and by taking over the greater part of Key's Building Yard, we were able to have an Officers' Mess, Sergeants' Mess and feeding accommodation for the men, all practically under one roof. When in camp, our two large marquees were so manipulated as to give sufficient dining and lecturing space. In the summer of 1915, we erected them in the Castle Grounds, which were very kindly put at our disposal by Lord Brownlow, and were used later as our machine-gun school. Out of our savings we were eventually able to put up five Company huts for lectures and recreation, each holding over 400 men; and one open miniature range and two closed ranges were provided. Our messing arrangements were specially successful, from the point of view of both economy and efficiency, the credit being mainly due to our Mess Steward of some 25 years' standing, John Daborn, and his wife. They had to deal with all manner of difficulties, but met them all with unabated cheerfulness and resource. For the first years of the war we received a money payment per man per day in lieu of rations. The rate was gradually reduced to 1s. 5½d., and at that rate we succeeded in feeding at one time 2,400 men; no mean achievement.

Through the kindness of Lady Brownlow, we were able to begin by using for our sick her hospital at Ashridge. Later, with the assistance of the ladies of the town, a V.A.D. hospital was organised, first at Barncroft, and then at the Beeches. Miss M. Blount was commandant up to March, 1917, when she was succeeded by Mrs. Porter, who up to that time had been Matron. Mrs. Porter continued as commandant up to October, 1918, when Mrs. Haygarth Brown took it over until its close in July, 1919. The hospital was run very economically and with great efficiency, and the Corps is greatly indebted to all the ladies concerned who, in addition to arduous duties, ran no small risk to their own families from our not being able to avoid sometimes sending infectious cases. Their names will be found in Appendix III.

The Y.M.C.A. put up a hut for us, which gradually increased in size, and the local secretary was indefatigable in looking after our men, and in assisting in their recreation: boxing and Saturday evening concerts became a great feature there.

Local authorities, school authorities, the clergy did all they could to help us; baths were a difficulty for some time, but the Water Company assisted, and residents placed both baths and sitting-rooms at our men's disposal. Much tried as many billetters must have been by the entry at all times of the night of mud-covered men, complaints were infinitesimal.

Altogether I believe most of our men agree that in spite of inevitable hardships, Berkhamsted gave them the time of their lives. There were no petty jealousies or obstruction—everyone was out to help. The conditions of life and training were for a hard-keen man ideal; he could feel himself always growing in efficiency, and consequent ability to serve his country. The Corps had a soul, and was joyously alive.

Chapter III.

THE CORPS (1ST OCTOBER TO 31ST DECEMBER, 1914).

On the 6th October, the newly-formed "D" Company came down, with O'Brien in command, Lefroy and Isaacs subalterns, and W. R. Briggs colour sergeant.

On the 14th October, the long-awaited "hairies" arrived for the Squadron.

On the 15th October, "E" Company came down with Clark as captain, Geare as subaltern, and P. M. Walters as colour sergeant. Shortly afterwards we obtained nearly 100 recruits from a camp at Epsom that had been formed for public school men, and they became "F" Company. There soon came a further demand for our rifles, having regard to the general shortage, but we managed to compromise on delivery up of 170. The question of equipment remained a burning one; the County of London T.F. Association had first to supply the battalions going abroad, and were themselves greatly handicapped by the War Office taking over several of their sources of supply. They promised us 100 sets of a substitute for the web equipment in a few weeks' time, and these were eventually delivered; but during the first two years we had to manage on very short supplies both of uniform and equipment, greatly to our disadvantage from the point of view of smartness. By the 1st December we had furnished 800 officers, and applications for more were pouring in on all sides. We were congratulated by the War Office on supplying so many officers of a good stamp, and they took over for the D.M.T.'s Department P. F. Warner, who had done us excellent service.

We were able also to help in other directions. At the request of General Sir Edward Hutton, commanding the 21st Division at Aston Clinton, we took over for monthly courses some of his more backward officers, and received his warmest thanks. At our dépôt at Lincoln's Inn, in addition to the training of our own recruits, we for two years gave a short training to men, generally sent by the War Office, who had been promised commissions, and had a few weeks to put in before receiving them. They were first known as the Old Brigade under P. F. Warner, and later, as the Unattested Contingent under Major Gregson; they ran into many hundreds, and mostly did well, one getting the V.C. At the instance of the Cavendish Association we also arranged for drills for public schoolboys during the Christmas and Easter holidays, which were largely attended; and at Berkhamsted we were glad to welcome officers from various school O.T.C.'s attached to us during the holidays. Kent, Calvert, and Moorsom from Harrow were our most frequent visitors, also Standfield and Ford from Wellington, and Aston from Tonbridge. Our own system of training was during these months fully developed, and the following letter to the papers sufficiently describes its main features:—

"Sir,

I have on a previous occasion through your columns urged the necessity of a continuous supply of men to be trained as officers, and with good results to this Corps. Owing, however, to the wastage at the Front, and the recruiting of the New Army, the demand for officers is always increasing. This corps has already supplied some 800 officers, and requires about 100 recruits a week to keep up the proper supply. On the other hand, patriotic impatience to get to the Front has caused a very large number of men, admirably qualified for command, to enlist as privates, to the great detriment, I venture to think, of the country. Many of them no doubt eventually obtain commissions; but the training involved in providing an efficient unit and the training of the individual as an officer are two quite different things, and the country needs officers trained in the quickest and most efficient way. There are also many stray corps or organisations which, though not recognised as Officers' Training Corps, yet offer to men joining them certain facilities for obtaining commissions.

"It is difficult to run a great war on improvised lines, and it is only by co-ordinated and methodical effort that we are likely to gain success. Certain corps have been long designated by the Army Authorities as Officers' Training Corps; it is surely the duty of all men who have the necessary education and aptitude for command, as also of every organisation that is in touch with such men, to see not only that they take their places as officers, but as officers trained on identical lines, and by the recognised and established organisations. The Inns of Court Officers' Training Corps consists of Public School and University men, and of men not having these qualifications, but who may be otherwise specially qualified to be officers. We realise the absolute necessity of quick as well as efficient training, and have speeded up our machinery accordingly. A recruit does some fortnight's drills at Headquarters, and is then sent down here, where we have excellent training facilities. As soon as he is ripe for it he is placed in a special instruction class. If, as is almost invariably the case, he is keen, and with a natural aptitude for command, we are generally able to recommend him within two months of his joining; and a commission follows in the regular course. He is by that time a useful officer, well grounded, and able to instruct in drill, musketry, and map-reading, and in the case of the cavalry, with a very fair knowledge of horsemanship. He has also learnt the routine of regimental life; the necessity for strict discipline, the enormous responsibility now attaching to an officer, and the shameful egotism of undertaking it heedlessly and without preparation.

"Our aim is necessarily a limited one, but we work on a system, and, I believe, with good results. Owing, however, to the continuous outflow, we need more and more recruits of the right stamp, both cavalry and infantry. I have little doubt that the publicity of your columns will enable us to get them. All details can be obtained at our Headquarters, 10, Stone Buildings, Lincoln's Inn.—Yours, etc.,

"FRANCIS H. L. ERRINGTON,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding,
Inns of Court Officers' Training Corps,
Berkhamsted, December 2nd."

So great was the demand, that the ordinary time available for the individual man rarely exceeded two or three months; we had, however, during this period, a particularly fine stamp of recruit, and though our numbers were in excess of establishment, the keenness and intelligence of the men made everything easy. Still we were not without anxieties; it was obvious that the men of the officer stamp were being encouraged to go into the ranks, and once in, it was almost impossible to get them out owing to the reluctance of Commanding Officers to weaken their units.

We applied frequently, but always in vain, for men who had enlisted in the various Public Schools Battalions. The students at Cardiff were advised to enlist at once, and did so, and there again it was impossible to retrieve them. We were at this time the only working training corps for officers, and although we still had a continuous stream of recruits, it was fairly certain that with our large and increasing output, the question of recruiting would soon assume importance. Still, when Christmas came and brought us 1,000 commissions, we were able to look back at the past few months with pride, and at the future with confidence. Sir Evelyn Wood wrote us a letter of congratulation, saying that if he were Director of Military Training, he would give no direct commissions, but would make all candidates pass through a Training Corps.

We got into billets in November, but had to Mess in camp up to the 7th December, when we moved our Mess into the wood-yard. On Christmas Day we lent our Mess-rooms for a mid-day meal to the New Army, having our own dinner all together in the evening, when Daborn, dressed as Father Christmas, brought in the plum pudding with a guard, and we finished up with a sing-song. Probably the only dissatisfied person in the camp was a man who the evening before, in a moment of exhilaration, had chased a girl out of a teashop and kissed her, as bad luck would have it, just under the eyes of the Adjutant and myself. He was on guard all night.

Chapter IV.

THE CORPS (1ST JANUARY TO 30TH SEPTEMBER, 1915).

Our four double Companies were now in full swing, "A" and "E" under Bergne formed No. 1, "B" and "H" under Kenyon No. 2, "C" and "F" under Negus No. 3, and "D" under O'Brien No. 4. "K" was the Dépôt Company for recruits. The Squadron's demands for horses had also been fairly well satisfied. Mainly Argentines, they picked up wonderfully with good horsemastership. The brewery stables were gradually improved, and two large lofts overhead housed adequately most of the men. They formed of necessity a unit a little apart, and had very properly their own convictions as to the superiority of cavalry over infantry, which was duly reciprocated by the infantry. Their interior economy and discipline, both under Captain Wood-Hill, who commanded them up to September, 1915, and under Captain Field, who commanded them for the rest of the war, were on a very high level. Here again their Sergeant-Majors and Quartermaster-Sergeants were enormously helpful: J. T. Morris, H. T. Witt, H. F. Yeatman, H. Porter, Fisher, Hamilton, Hanworth, and others—and Jim Kerr, the Armourer, an old employé of the Corps, must not be forgotten.

Many of the horses fell victims this winter to pink eye and ringworm, but Farrier-Sergeant J. C. Porter (afterwards Assistant Director of Remounts in France), with Captain Wilson, the Veterinary Officer at Berkhamsted, managed to pull them through. The great advantage for training purposes of cavalry and infantry working together is obvious; we were also fortunate enough to see something of artillery work. Lieut.-Colonel N. C. Coates, who had been wounded at the Marne, and now commanded a Brigade of Field Artillery, brought his guns out on our field-days, umpired for us, and was always ready to give our officers an insight into artillery work. We much missed the Brigade when they left Berkhamsted in the summer.

About the beginning of the year, we found that some of our men upon joining their regiments were being sent to the schools of instruction provided for untrained officers. At an interview, however, with the D.M.T., I ascertained that this had been done in error, and that his instructions were that no men commissioned from the Corps were to be sent to those schools. Similar instructions were re-issued from time to time. On the same occasion a suggestion was made by the D.M.T. that we should take 50 officers for instruction; this suggestion fell through as we were not able to supply messing accommodation, but it was a compliment to our methods of training.

On the 14th March, McLean returned to us from censoring in France. Upon my representations, he had come to the conclusion that his greater sphere of usefulness lay with the Corps. It is difficult to exaggerate the resulting benefit. He became at once Assistant Adjutant, thus setting the Adjutant more free for field duties, and he remained first as Assistant Adjutant, and finally as Adjutant right to the end of the war. It was a position of the first importance to the Corps, not only from the point of view of the masses of work involved, but also having regard to the tact and delicate handling required for meeting the various problems constantly threatening its very existence. In spite of endless work, and continued worries and anxieties of every kind, it is not on record that he ever lost his temper!

For the first year, returns were comparatively light; they increased as the war continued, and we found ourselves in 1916 under five different authorities, but the more personal correspondence that needed individual handling was throughout extremely heavy. The mother who was sure her boy would make a good leader of men as he had been so successful in organising village concerts; the furious father who could not understand why his son had been rejected, and threatened a question in the House; the highly-placed official who confidently recommended the son of a lady friend as a desirable acquisition for the Corps; all these required the courteous answer that turns away wrath. There was an endless volume of correspondence relating to the men leaving day by day for commissions—at this time about 60 a week: letters from Commanding Officers asking for suitable men, and in many cases imploring us to save them from the material unloaded from other quarters. Then arrangements had to be made for Commanding Officers interviewing candidates; all sorts of local matters, and questions affecting the interior economy of the Corps had to be attended to; and during a great part of the war, McLean, except for meals, hardly left the Orderly Room from 8 a.m. to 11 or 12 o'clock at night.

In the Spring of this year the recruiting question began to give us great anxiety. Recruiting was going down all over the country, and we were in a very special position. Up to 1896, the Corps had consisted of members of the Bar and students. Owing to insufficient support, it then opened its ranks to public school and university men. Before the war we confined our recruiting to the greater public schools, but early in the war this particular source ran dry, as boys from these schools received their commission direct on the strength of their training in the School O.T.C.'s. Complaints were made to the War Office that we were excluding various schools, and on applying to the War Office for a definition, I was informed that "a public school" was a "school open to the public!" Finally, however, it was arranged with the D.M.T. that there should be no school test, but that our principle of selection should be the possession by the candidate of such qualifications as we thought necessary for his training as an officer. This ruling was on absolutely sound lines; but it is interesting, in view of future developments, to note that the breaking down of our exclusiveness was due mainly to the action of the War Office. Notwithstanding, however, the widening of our area, recruiting was diminishing; while, at the same time, the demand for our men was constantly on the increase. As a Corps, though largely composed of lawyers, we had always shrunk from self-advertisement. The war had widened our circle of influence, but we still recruited within rather narrow limits; and there was a general impression about, perhaps founded on our name of the Devil's Own, that only people connected with the Bar were eligible. The question had to be faced whether we should die genteelly of inanition, or advertise and live. Very unwillingly, but greatly influenced by the example of the War Office in advertising for young officers at the beginning of the war, we chose the latter alternative. Having chosen it, we took no half measures.

Under the general direction of Major Hay at the dépôt, Ryan collected a number of civilian helpers, and got into touch with the big steamship and railway lines. I wish it were possible to give the names of all, both inside and outside the dépôt, who gave us whole-hearted and invaluable assistance. Prominent among them, in addition to the clergy in nearly every parish, and Col. Unsworth, of the Salvation Army, were the High Commissioners and Agents-General for the Dominions, Mr. Cameron McGregor, of the Glen Line; Mr. Hunt, of the Union Castle Line, in fact all the heads of the great shipping and railway lines. Mr. Walter Howard helped on the theatrical side, Mr. W. A. Evans, secretary to the Head Masters' Conference, assisted with the schools, and the late Sir John Boraston gave generous help in all directions; Members of Parliament, too, Sir John Butcher, Sir C. Kinlock Cooke, Sir Ellis Griffiths, Mr. Llewellyn Williams, Mr. A. Biglan, Mr. J. H. Thomas, and, in cases affecting Irishmen, Mr. Redmond. Inside the dépôt were A. S. Cooper (afterwards a Brigadier General, C.B., C.M.G.), C. Vincent, R. Montague Scott, G. Ogilvy Jackson, and on the publicity side A. E. Bundy. Gradually a network of voluntary agents for giving information about the Corps to likely applicants spread over Great Britain, and to the Dominions, and friendly countries all over the world. At the same time these agencies were used only for the collection of candidates; their acceptance was entirely in the hands of the Selection Committee at the dépôt, to which, as C.O., I had delegated my powers in this respect. For the convenience of candidates, Selection Boards were established in various localities to sift out those who were not likely to be ultimately accepted. The names of the original members of the various Boards will be found in Appendix III., and the Corps owes them, and particularly the London Committee, an immense debt of gratitude for tedious and ungrateful work done with the utmost care and goodwill. The results very quickly showed themselves. The average number of recruits per week for October, November, and December, 1914, was 61. The average for January, February, and March, 1915, sank to 47. For April, May, and June, it rose to 90, and from then onwards, until recruiting was stopped, we had a constant stream. It is calculated that some 130,000 candidates came before our Selection Boards and Committee, of whom one in ten only was accepted.

On the 25th May we lost our Adjutant, Rainsford-Hannay, who, after many applications on his part, got off to France. It was a great piece of luck for us that we were able to keep him so long. He was not only a most able officer, full of energy and initiative, but he understood and sympathised with the territorial spirit. Absolutely free from red tape, he considered it no part of his duty to suppress keenness and enthusiasm; he knew how to direct them into the channel of efficiency, and his influence was accordingly immense. He ran the final Instruction Class, which every man had to go through before leaving, and he was also a lecturer of first-rate ability. Every evening he lectured to the whole Corps for about half an hour on all questions connected with the economy of a regiment, and the duties of an officer on joining. It was mainly owing to his teaching that our men got the reputation of not asking questions, but carrying on at once, when they joined their units.

He was succeeded, at our request, by Captain Iremonger, also of the Queen's Regiment, who had been wounded on the Marne. He, too, quickly identified himself with the Corps.

When we reached our 2,000 commissions, we resolved to celebrate the achievement by asking our Honorary Colonel, Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, to inspect us. In answer, he fixed the 18th June as being the anniversary of Waterloo, and also a day, as he wrote, that he particularly remembered, "for I got a big hole in me that day 60 years ago." (in the assault on Sebastopol). The inspection took place in Kitchener's Field. The day was beautiful, and the field with its gentle slopes made an ideal place for a ceremonial function. The Corps received him in line with a general salute, he then inspected it, and we marched past, first the Infantry in column with the Squadron at the walk, and then the Squadron at the gallop, and the Infantry in close column, finishing up with an advance in review order. The Field Marshal addressed us as follows:—

"Much has happened since 1908, when this historic regiment became an Officers' Training Corps in consequence of a request I made by desire of Colonel Glen and Major Sankey to a sympathetic fellow-barrister in the person of Mr. Haldane, the Secretary of State for War.

"Much more has, however, happened in the ten months from August, 1914, when I looked at some of your squads in the Temple Gardens.

"The fact that the regiment has imparted the rudiments of training to 2,190 men constitutes what is, and I imagine must be an unsurpassable record. It reflects the very greatest credit on Colonel Errington, Major Mead, and the Adjutant. My heart goes out to those men, who, fortunately for themselves, are not as old as I am, and have the honour and satisfaction of preparing you gentlemen to hold commissions and to fight for the country. I am glad to learn that your system of squadron training is mainly devoted to the care of the horse, and to musketry. The first is essential for success in war, for the losses in South Africa, 15 years ago, arising from ignorance were appalling.

"I am an expert in such matters, for a regiment I raised 55 years ago was sent in the last few years to maintain the interests of the Empire in the Southern half of Persia, which is about three times the area of the United Kingdom.

THE CORPS (1ST JANUARY TO 30TH SEPTEMBER, 1915).

" Although 40 years ago I was Commandant of a School of Instruction, yet in order to be up to date I talked over your Synopsis of Instruction with a Major of a Regiment which has helped to make history for 200 years, and he commended warmly your system.

" I took further expert advice from one who is unusually fitted to express an opinion on the subject. Nearly a quarter of a century ago, when commanding at Aldershot, I recommended a sergeant in a Cavalry Regiment, whom I had employed during manœuvres, for a commission. He rose rapidly, and retired some years ago with the rank of colonel and decorations. When he was appointed to command a Battalion of the New Armies and asked me to assist him to find subaltern officers, I referred him to your Colonel, who sent him six, and my friend, the ex-orderly, when allowed to exceed his establishment, asked Colonel Errington for six more. He is thoroughly satisfied with the whole dozen, and says 'There is not one bad one among them.' In reply to my question about the training, he writes 'I do not feel I can make any useful suggestion for its improvement, and heartily wish that every one of my officers new to the Service had had the advantage of the Inns of Court Officers' Corps training. It is an excellent foundation on which a commanding officer can build.' "

We had supplied Sir Evelyn with a horse for the occasion, and he cantered about the field as if the day had been really 60 years ago. He was delightfully unconventional in his inspections. I remember on an occasion before the war, he told the Squadron Commander he wanted to see his men dismount and mount. One with an injured arm had a difficulty in mounting, his saddle slipping over; Sir Evelyn at once went round and held on to the off stirrup till the man was up. It is not an everyday affair to see a Field Marshal helping a trooper to mount!

Our establishment at this time was 1,133, and our strength 1,392; but a threatening cloud now rose over our recruiting horizon. We had made arrangements for meeting the incoming boats at Liverpool, as many of our best recruits came from overseas; this was strongly objected to by Lord Derby, who regarded it as encroaching on the recruiting area of the Lancashire Territorials. Fortunately he was under the misapprehension that we were recruiting for an ordinary Territorial Unit. As soon as he realised our composition and objects, he became our warm supporter. His brother, General Stanley, was commanding the 89th Brigade, and we arranged with Lord Derby to take over and train men selected from the various regiments, and earmark them for the Brigade. The Commanding Officers put forward their selected men, who were then interviewed by Major Hay, and if accepted by him, came on to Berkhamsted, and were dealt with under the above arrangement. We took over on this footing between 200 and 300 men.

The Corps was now, and had been for some time, considerably over establishment, and it was necessary to apply for two more double Companies. We were very fortunate just at this time in having Colonel Adye as chief staff officer in the D.M.T.'s. Department at the War Office. He had stayed near Berkhamsted, and knew our system of training, and our application was granted without demur. Unfortunately, Colonel Adye only remained for about three months, dying, I think, in September, and we had occasion to regret his sympathetic personality and comprehending mind. The two new Companies were numbered five and six. No. 6 for the time being formed the Dépôt Company for recruits under Mathews, and only came down to Berkhamsted early in July, 1916. No. 5 Company was placed under the command of Captain O'Brien, and was mainly composed of the Lancashire men we had taken under the arrangement with Lord Derby, and of the men sent over from Ireland by the Dublin Selection Board. This Board was established by us in August under our recruiting scheme. Its formation and successful working in the face of great difficulties was a triumph for Ryan's capacity for organisation, quick decision, and persuasive diplomacy. When he, with two of our best civilian helpers, A. S. Cooper and R. M. Scott, arrived in Dublin, they found it would be comparatively easy to set up an influential Selection Board, but very difficult to obtain the support of all parties, which was our object. The Nationalists and Ulstermen would not easily mingle; Headquarters of the Irish Command were not favourably disposed towards anything new, and the interests of the Dublin University O.T.C. and the Irish Cadet Companies had to be considered. Ryan at once decided that Mr. Redmond's approval was the first essential; having wired for an interview, he motored the many miles to his house, and came back with a promise of his support, which was warmly given. The "Freeman's Journal" published articles pointing out the thoroughly representative character of the Board, and the advantages of joining the Corps; and in a week's time the Board was in full swing with the heartiest support of the public. Nationalist volunteers and Ulster volunteers came over together, trained together, and often insisted on going to the same Irish regiment. The Board carried on its work with the utmost energy and discretion; and while our thanks are due to every member, I may perhaps be allowed particularly to express our gratitude to Mr. Justice Ross, Sir Edward O'Farrel, D. A. Johnson (an old member of the Corps) and R. W. Brown, the Board's most efficient secretary.

The Irish contingent, ably handled by O'Brien in No. 5 Company, had its amusing side. Many men will remember a night on Northchurch Common, when No. 5 Company developed a singularly unanimous and consumptive cough. Individual modes of expression too were sometimes quaint. I always interviewed the Irish candidates for the Corps myself, and remember one of them saying, by way of a polite effort as he left the room, "Well, so long, Colonel; I'll surely be meeting you again hanging round!"

The numbers still continued to rise, and we were now turning out about 80 officers a week. Our relations with the Territorial Force Department at the War Office were always of the happiest, and the Director-General, Sir Edward Bethune, was good enough to come down on several occasions and speak some words of encouragement and advice to the men who were leaving. There had been a constant desire among our officers to get to the Front, a desire I had had to set my face against, since I felt convinced that, as specially chosen and specially trained men, they were doing much better work for the country at Berkhamsted. I am happy to say Sir Edward took the same view, and advised them accordingly. It was sometimes suggested by people who knew nothing about training that we should take wounded officers in their place. Such a course would have been fatal to our system. A wounded officer means, and was subsequently found to mean, cramped training. It was absolutely necessary for our purpose that the officer should be able to march better, to fight better, to think quicker, and to lecture and instruct better than the men; and every fresh officer was carefully selected from a number of men themselves well above the average, both physically and mentally. Nor was the war experience of a wounded officer a sufficient compensation for his loss of vitality. Trench warfare was in itself a cramping experience, and in its details continually changing.

Our object was to train men for open warfare; specialising came better when they joined their units. It would obviously, however, be of advantage to our officers to have an opportunity of seeing things at the front, and a beginning was made in September, when Kenyon and I, with Colonel Shirley commanding the 2nd Battalion of the Artists, had ten days in France. The 1st Battalion of the Artists very kindly put us up at St. Omer, where we spent five days going over the army machine-gun school, bombing school, and ordinary schools of instruction. We managed also to get a couple of days in the trenches at Aveluy Wood, near Albert, and a day in the Salient. So far as the schools were concerned, we had nothing to learn; certain special features were interesting, but for general purposes they had nothing like our training advantages. In the following year all our officers got the opportunity of 10 days or so experience in the trenches, useful in giving a sense of reality to their instruction.

By the 1st October we had 3,000 Commissions. Several men had lately gone to the Grenadier, Coldstream, and Scots Guards, and I received from Colonel Streatfeild, Col. Drummond Hay and Colonel Strachey letters of warm commendation of our men with an urgent request for more. The letters of thanks and of appreciation we received were really innumerable, and this perhaps represented the high-water mark of the Corps activities as a practically independent unit. Our recruiting system was in full working order. We had some 22,000 voluntary information agencies, 18,500 in the United Kingdom, and 3,500 in the Oversea Dominions and in friendly countries. No political machinery was used; there was no resort to meetings, no Press campaign. The agents brought to the notice of suitable men the needs of the country, and their responsibilities, and the men converted one another. Our Selection Boards were composed partly of old regular officers, and partly of influential civilians. Owing to the want of a definite policy in this respect at the beginning of the war, the original officer class was no longer available; but in fixing the new standard, it would have been difficult to collect a more competent body of men than those who composed our Boards. The recruits did their preliminary training at Lincoln's Inn, and it is impossible to rate too highly the capacity shown by Major Hay, Captain Mathews, Lieutenant Brett, Sergeants Leffman, C. Terrell, Mahaffy, Cusse, C. E. L. Hooper, L. C. Williams, Birks, Bacon, Gregsten, Scholchfield, and others, in dealing with the large numbers of recruits who, owing to want of accommodation at Berkhamsted, had to be retained in London for considerably longer than the original time contemplated. Fortunately we were able to add some machine-gun work to their musketry. Brett made the acquaintance of the inventor of the Lewis Gun, who was good enough to let him have a gun, and to allow him to spend two or three days at the manufactory. Recruit drill was also varied by some more advanced work on Wimbledon Common. Still the want of billeting accommodation at Berkhamsted was a great drawback, and really an unnecessary one, as there were plenty of vacant houses, but the authority to take them over was very slow in coming. Our object and methods of training at Berkhamsted remained the same.

The recruits on coming down were taken over by R.S.M. Burns, who had come to us from the Scots Guards in 1913. Immaculate in appearance, with every detail of army life at his fingers' ends, the R.S.M. was also an excellent lecturer, and I believe one of the best speakers at the Army Temperance meetings. He assisted the Adjutant with the Instruction Class, and was in every respect a man of very high standards, and invaluable for our purposes. From him, the recruits passed into their various Companies. The Squadron and Company commanders had a very free hand, and did as much of their work as possible in the open country. Every Infantry man finished up with a month in the Instruction Class under the Adjutant and (at this time) Captain Pollock, and had two or three days' instruction with the Lewis gun under Poyser, an instructor of genius in this line. As soon as a man was passed by the Adjutant he came up to Orders, and was earmarked for a particular unit, or was noted generally as ready for a commission. Every day we had letters from Commanding Officers asking for men, and almost every day we had Commanding Officers down who looked over the men available, and selected those they thought suitable. They then applied to the War Office for the men selected, and their commissions came through as a matter of course. The system was simple, direct, and worked admirably; and the Corps machinery was running with absolute smoothness, every officer and man playing his part.

If one may believe the practically unanimous opinions of Commanding Officers who took officers from us, our men were well grounded, keen, and with plenty of backbone. Undoubtedly we had certain inevitable weaknesses. We had no means of teaching mess manners where they were wanted; on the other hand, the self-restraint, which is at the root of good manners, we could and did teach. A real and a very damaging drawback in the eyes of authority was the impossibility of giving our men a smart appearance. We owed a great deal to the Territorial Force Association and their Secretary, Captain Mansbridge; but in spite of all their efforts they were quite unable to furnish us with proper uniforms or equipment. Many of our men had only one set of uniform, and the cutting and fitting left much to be desired. They were out in all weathers, and at all times, mud, water, brambles, all played havoc with their kits. Personal cleanliness we, of course, could and did insist on, and many a man after getting back at 1 or 2 a.m. from night operations had to sit up another hour or so cleaning up for the C.O.'s parade next morning, but a smart appearance was really beyond us, unless we sacrificed efficiency to outward show.

Chapter V.

THE CORPS (1ST OCTOBER TO 31ST DECEMBER, 1915).

Hitherto we had been singularly free from any outside interference: we had developed freely, and entirely on our own initiative. Although we had had very little official help, we had also experienced no obstruction. We had filled a gap, and we hoped adequately. The necessity for such training as the Corps was giving could not be questioned, and with the disappearance of the old officer class, it was becoming more and more necessary. Nor was it wasteful to the country. The advantage and economy of such training were put shortly as follows in a memorandum I wrote in connection with the Derby Scheme:—

"A. It may be expected that the men selected for officers will be of the only class now available. It has not had the same advantages, educational and otherwise, as the pre-war class, and therefore requires a more discriminating selection and a longer training. Men can only be successfully broken into habits of discipline, and to a sense of responsibility, before they become officers. After they become officers, they regard any sort of school (except purely technical ones) as irksome and unnecessary. In an O.T.C. a man knows he will not get a commission unless he earns it. Give him a commission straight away, and he has no real stimulus to make himself efficient, beyond the frequently inadequate one of patriotism.

B. The cost of a three months' training in an O.T.C. is as follows:—

	£	s.	d.
Three months' pay at 1/- per day	4	10	0
„ „ kit allowance at 2d. per day	0	15	0
„ „ ration allowance at 1/9 per day	7	17	6
	£13	2	6

The cost of a three months' training after commission:—

	£	s.	d.
Three months' pay at 7/6 per day	33	15	0
„ „ ration allowance at 1/9 per day	7	17	6
	£41	12	6

In addition each officer receives £50 outfit allowance, which is, of course, a great deal more than the cost of providing a private soldier's uniform, and which is entirely lost to the country if the commissioned officer, who is in such cases not tested until he has received his commission, proves to be unsuitable."

The Derby Scheme gave a new stimulus to our recruiting. We were getting towards 2,000 men at Berkhamsted, and for their proper organisation it was very desirable that the Corps establishment should be increased by two more double companies. Our application was, however, turned down, with somewhat serious results in the near future. Elasticity in our numbers was really a necessary condition of our existence, so long, at least, as recruiting was on a voluntary basis. Notwithstanding our widespread organisation, the stream of recruits could never flow quite evenly; and we had to be ready to take advantage of a flood. It was also possible, as indeed happened, that the outflow would be stopped, causing, inevitably, congestion in the ranks. Our establishment of officers per squadron or company was only the usual one, and, there came a time, when it was only by almost superhuman efforts they could keep their heads above the surging tide of recruits; an addition to our authorised establishment of two double companies would have made all the difference.

Leveson Gower now left us and became a G.S.O. 3 at Headquarters Central Force; he was subsequently transferred to the Coldstream Guards, and was killed in 1918. When he left us he wrote me that he looked back to his time at Berkhamsted as the very happiest of his life. He had been a long time in the Corps, was an excellent disciplinarian, and a man of all-round knowledge.

Gradually, as we found we could without injury to the training substitute new men from our ranks, I let some others of our officers go. Negus went to a Battalion of the King's Shropshire Light Infantry, which he subsequently commanded, getting the D.S.O., but was severely wounded. Wood-Hill, commanding the Squadron, went to the Northamptonshire Yeomanry, and was succeeded by Field. We lost also an excellent civilian worker at the dépôt, A. S. Cooper.

THE CORPS (1ST OCTOBER TO 31ST DECEMBER, 1915).

In November we had an unpleasant shock. A certain number of our men were ready for commissions, and most of them had been chosen by various Commanding Officers. Instead, however, of their commissions coming through, we received for the first time an order from the War Office that they were to be sent up to be interviewed there. They went up accordingly, and were looked over by two officers in one of the long passages. To our surprise ten were rejected, and were declared to be not fit for commissions. The procedure was not satisfactory, as the interviews were necessarily, having regard to the press of business at the War Office, lightning interviews lasting under three minutes, and no attempt could of course be made to gauge the candidate's military knowledge. I went up at once, and pointed out to the D.M.T. that all these men had been selected for the Corps by a Board which included regular officers of long experience and standing, and that while the questions asked, which related mainly to their schools and occupations, were very suitable in regard to their preliminary selection, and had in fact then been gone into, they had no relevance at the end of their training, the obvious result being to waste both their time and ours. I suggested an officer of the department sometimes attending our Selection Board, but it was ultimately arranged that our Adjutant should be present at any such future interviews. There followed, of course, a shower of indignant letters from the parents of the rejected men and from the commanding officers who had selected them. Eventually I think all the men concerned obtained commissions.

Our Adjutant, Captain Iremonger, was now anxious to rejoin his regiment, and I supported his application to the War Office for that purpose: soon afterwards Capt. A. L. Bonham Carter, from the K.R.R.C., reported as our new Adjutant. He very quickly fitted into his place in the Corps, and became a Corps man.

There were considerable changes in the War Office at this time, when Sir W. Robertson and many of his staff came back from France. The D.M.T.'s Department changed its name to S.D. iii. We received an intimation that 100 commissions at all would for the moment be granted. No explanation, or warning as to future policy was given, and we were faced with a very serious difficulty. Our recruiting had been on an average about 100 a week, which was necessary to replace the outgoing men. The recruiting tap, however, could not be regulated: it was impossible to turn it on or off strictly according to requirements. If a large number of suitable men appeared in one week, they had to be taken, they would not wait. To turn off the tap altogether would have been suicidal. The fact of our having closed recruiting was certain to spread like wildfire, and no amount of explanation that it was purely a temporary measure would have been of the slightest avail. It is very doubtful whether we should ever have been able to catch up again. As officers were wanted as much as ever, I came to the conclusion that the stoppage of commissions was connected with the turnover at the War Office, and would be of very slight duration. As a matter of fact it lasted nearly two months, and acted greatly to our detriment. The Derby Scheme had brought home to a great number of men the country's necessities, and we had a rush of recruits both from home and from abroad. Additional Selection Boards had been established in Edinburgh, Exeter, and Cardiff, all including both military and civil members, and the number of applicants frequently ran to several hundreds a day. Our strength went up by leaps and bounds, creating considerable congestion at Lincoln's Inn, and entailing considerable hardship on the men who had to stay in London as we still lacked authority to take over empty houses at Berkhamsted, and we were short of staff to deal with such numbers, owing to the refusal to raise our establishment.

This Christmas was marked by a most successful entertainment got up by our officers in the shape of a Revue, entitled "Look Level or not a Move." One verse, characterising the different companies may be inserted here:—

"If you go to No. 1, you'll write out papers;
If you go to No. 2, you'll have to walk;
If you go to 3 or 4, you'll do navvies' work galore;
If you go to No. 5, O'B. will talk!"

Later literary efforts included the "Hades Herald" and the "Gehenna Gazette," both edited by Horne, and entertainments were given by the Mummerys of Mephistopheles.

Chapter VI.

THE CORPS (1ST JANUARY TO 1ST SEPTEMBER, 1916).

Several of our officers left us now or later in the year. They had all done such good work, I felt obliged to give way to their desire to get to the front. Isaacs, then commanding No. 4 Company, left in January, being temporarily attached to Headquarters, London District, until he went to France. Attenborough from the Squadron went to the Machine Gun Corps. C. H. Vincent, a most helpful civilian worker at the Dépôt, went in May. Trench, commanding No. 3 Company, joined the 2/5th Battalion Sherwood Foresters in April; he was killed in 1918. Willink, then commanding No. 1, went in June to the 2/4th Battalion the Berkshire Regiment; he also was killed in 1918. Pollock, who had run our Instruction Class under the Adjutant, went as an Assistant Instructor to the 2nd Army School in France. It was some time before he was trusted to deliver a lecture. He too was killed in 1918, as also was Edwin Clarke, who had joined the 8th Battalion London Regiment (Post Office Rifles). It would be difficult to find a more brilliant group of young officers than those killed in 1918; they had all been with us before the war, and were typical Corps men, self-sacrificing, enthusiastic, and pre-eminently efficient. O'Brien also left us for France, and finished in command of the 2nd City of London Yeomanry. Johnson of the squadron went to the R.F.A.; and Wakefield, who was killed in 1917, joined the 2/8th London Regiment. A. N. Clark (now commanding the Corps) joined the 24th London.

By the 1st February commissions began to be granted again, and we reached our 4,500. I received a warm letter of congratulation from Sir Evelyn Wood, and a letter about the same time from Mr. Justice Ross saying that General Friend, commanding in Ireland, had spoken to him in the highest terms of the way in which the Irish officers had been trained by us.

We had for some time supplied officers to all branches of the army, and many of both our Squadron and Infantry Companies had gone to the Artillery. We could, however, of course give very little technical training for the latter arm, and in January the War Office gave us the chance of sending some men to an artillery training unit. Very little time was given us, and we were not able to do much selection, but it was of indirect use in drawing attention to our lack of proper clothing and equipment. Immediately after the men arrived I received a letter from the War Office drawing attention to the diversity of uniform, and the lack of suitable breeches. I was able to point out in reply our great difficulties in supply, and after that we were better provided, ultimately securing a corps tailor.

One of the first subjects to engage Sir W. Robertson's attention, when he came back from France, must have been the training of officers. During the first eighteen months of the war, except by the action of Lord French in turning the 1st Battalion of the Artists Rifles into an Officers' Training Corps, nothing had been done towards the preliminary training of the thousands of officers that were required. The School O.T.C.'s provided a certain number of boys with elementary training, and with the invaluable sense of public school discipline, but necessarily with no knowledge of regimental life. The Universities had no undergraduates to fill their O.T.C.'s. The field of training was occupied only by ourselves and the Artists, whose 1st and 2nd Battalions had been established as an O.T.C. in accordance with Lord French's chance intervention. Satisfactory as according to all accounts the quality of their training was, the two Corps could only deal with a limited number in comparison with the thousands required, and the remainder entered practically untrained. They were then hurried from course to course, which, at the best, made the officer a specialist before he had acquired military instincts, or the capacity to command. The task of remedying this state of things was now entrusted mainly to staff officers recently returned from France with a natural bias towards their own old Sandhurst training, and with an equally natural dislike of any exceptions to a uniform plan. No attempt was made during these two months to become practically acquainted with the organisations that had hitherto filled the gap, or to make use of their experience, and on the 12th February, the prevailing silence as to the future was broken in a curiously casual way. I happened to be at the War Office on some small matter, when I was told Colonel X— would like to see me. I met him on the stairs, and at this staircase interview he informed me it was intended to establish cadet units for training officers all over the country, and asked me whether we would rather train men for cadet units, or embody some cadet companies in the Corps. I, of course, said we should prefer to have some cadet companies, and he agreed to arrange it so. The new scheme at first sight sounded a step in the right direction. We had long pointed out that men ought to receive their training as officers before getting their commissions and not after. On the other hand, I personally distrusted the formation of a number of small Sandhursts for the quick training of men who were no longer boys fresh from school, and so far as the Corps was concerned, it was easy to foresee that our cadet companies, unless forming for all purposes part of the Corps, and under the same command, would drive a wedge in it, as in fact ultimately happened. Our endeavour, therefore, from this time forward was to preserve the unity of the Corps as part of the new organisation.

THE CORPS (1ST JANUARY TO 1ST SEPTEMBER, 1916).

In the course of this month the Selection Board in Edinburgh had to be dissolved. The military authorities frowned on it, and the Edinburgh University O.T.C. complained of poaching. Scotch feeling was aroused, and acting on a hint from Sir Edward Bethune we thought it best to withdraw. We made preparations, however, to establish a Board at York. The question of our establishment under the new system was now being debated. Our actual numbers were over 4,000, of whom a considerable number were prevented by an epidemic of measles from coming to Berkhamsted; these numbers were abnormal, and the result of the holding up of Commissions. The authority dealing with us suggested an immediate transfer of 2,000 to the ranks of other units. The obvious injustice of such a course being pointed out, various expedients were devised for diminishing the numbers. I put forward a scheme for reducing the numbers by 1,676, mainly by transfers to other O.T.C.'s or cadet schools, and partly by discharges or transfers to the ranks of men under 18, and of men not likely to make good officers. I suggested the increase we had already asked for of our establishment by another two Companies, which would enable us to deal with the remaining 2,300: two or three of the Companies to be Cadet Companies; Major Sir Frederic Kenyon to be responsible generally for the senior division, and Captain C. T. A. Pollock for the junior, while I exercised general supervision. I pointed out the advantage of training officers on the same lines from start to finish, as against the overlapping which must result from elementary training in one unit and advanced training in another; but such a scheme was not according to plan, and was rejected.

We were in the habit from time to time of sending our record of commissions to the four Inns of Court, and on the 24th February, the Benchers of Lincoln's Inn passed the following resolution, which they were good enough to communicate to us: "That the Benchers of Lincoln's Inn have read with much appreciation the remarkable record which has been presented to them of the work of the Inns of Court O.T.C., and desire to congratulate their fellow Bencher, Colonel Errington, and his fellow officers on the striking success of their efforts, and on the invaluable services which they have rendered to the Army and the State." About this time I heard again from the Regimental Adjutant of the Grenadier Guards that all the men we had sent them were doing excellent work.

We had hitherto been singularly free from official inspections. The only inspection had been of our cooking arrangements, which had been reported on in the highest terms. On the 25th February, however, General Woolley Dod was sent by the Home Forces to inspect the Corps. His report to the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief was as follows:—

INSPECTION OF INNS OF COURT OFFICERS TRAINING CORPS.

DATE OF INSPECTION—25TH FEBRUARY, 1916.

The Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief,
Home Forces.

In spite of there being about nine inches of snow lying, I found out-door work going on.

All the training that I saw was of 1st Class quality, and it was a pleasure to see the keenness and zeal shown by the men.

The only criticism I have to make is that I think that training in bayonet fighting might be given more prominence in the syllabus.

Advantage was taken of the fall of snow to give a very instructive lesson in trench warfare.

By heaping up the snow two lines of opposing trenches were constructed.

The opposing parties "T"ted out from their respective trenches and connected up the "T" heads to make new trenches. When within range, bombing parties were used and casualties practised, the routine of bringing up bombs, replacing casualties, etc., being carried out.

Thus an instructive exercise in trench warfare was carried out in a couple of hours, without breaking any ground, which would have taken about 10 days' work if actual trenches had been made, instead of snow parapets.

I went round the Squadron stables with the Commanding Officer, and the horses were in good hard condition.

A few of them struck me as being more suitable for light draught than for riding.

The administration and discipline of the Corps appeared to be excellent.

(Signed), O.C. WOOLLEY DOD,
Brigadier-General,
Inspector of Infantry.

Horse Guards, S.W.
26th February, 1916.

From this time forward we had continual inspections and staff visits of a different and more limited type, and not, I think, very satisfactory to the inspectors or inspected. The only commonsense way of assessing the merits of a manufacturing business like ours would have been to send someone down for a short period to watch our machinery and output. The looking over of squads in Kitchener's Field, adequate as it may have been in the leisurely preparations of pre-war days, led I believe to somewhat erroneous conclusions. Lack of a sufficient number of trained N.C.O.'s was made a matter of adverse comment, and I was told they could be easily supplied, but we had when the Cadet Companies came into being a disconcerting experience of the type of N.C.O. available. Six were sent down to one of the Cadet Companies, and the next day the regular officer commanding it asked my permission to send the whole lot back as useless, which was done. Unquestionably our own N.C.O.'s had not as a rule the snap or smartness of the pre-war regular. Although we tried to keep a certain number rather longer than the usual period, a man generally became an N.C.O. simply as part of his training, and, of course, went away as soon as he was fit for a commission. If we had been working on the Sandhurst system, the want of experience in the N.C.O.'s might have been a weak point, and it may in any case be asked why we did not try to obtain at least a certain number of permanent N.C.O.'s. The answer, I believe to be a complete one. It might be enough to say that the pre-war N.C.O. no longer existed; but in any case he was not part of our system. Our object was not perfect drill, nor were we dealing with boys, or trying to develop a particular type. Our object was a high standard of character; we were dealing with men, and trying to produce officers according to their individualities. That we all, officers, N.C.O.'s and men, were of the same class was in itself an enormous asset; once placed men with lower standards in authority, and corruption and various other evils are simply bound to ensue. Inexperienced in the military sense our N.C.O.'s of course were, but not inexperienced in the wider life, or ignorant of what constitutes true discipline. Above all they had the unfailing advice and guidance of their Regimental and Company-Sergeant-Majors, and in the Squadron, where work was necessarily more concentrated, the close supervision of their officers. The Company-Sergeant-Majors were all men who had declined commissions for the good of the Corps. P.M. Walters was C.S.M. of No. 1, and probably left the deepest impress on every man who came under him. An old and famous 'Varsity blue, he was also a born soldier; to see him deal with his Company was a lesson in the art of training. If he had a weakness, it was for close-order drill; but every detail of military life seemed his peculiar province. He was feared by the slackers, adored by every man of backbone, and a constant source of joy to the C.O. C.S.M. Perks, of No. 2, and C.S.M. Gutteridge, of No. 3 Company, had both had long experience in the Corps: men of the highest standards, and of all-round efficiency, their influence went right through their Companies, giving to each individual man a feeling of support, and a stimulus to action. Nor were the newer men a whit inferior. C.S.M. Briggs fathered No. 4 Company, perhaps with a slightly greater air of autocracy, in the same genial way; C.S.M. Williams, with a touch of sardonic decision, ruled No. 5 Company, an exhilarating though sometimes a little difficult crowd, equally effectively. They were the real backbone of the Corps and the foundation of its stimulating discipline. I can imagine no more wanton or wicked piece of folly from a training point of view than to try to eliminate such men from the Corps, or to substitute for them the ordinary N.C.O.

THE CORPS (1ST JANUARY TO 1ST SEPTEMBER, 1916).

While, however, such inspections would in the ordinary way have been mere incidents in our training, we soon realised that they were closely connected with the remodelling of our establishment, which gradually developed into a struggle for existence.

From the point of view of rigid adherence to plan, our position was an anomalous one, and from the outset the department concerned, S.D.III., were inclined to employ rather ruthless cutting-down tactics. On the other hand our object was to carry on as before during the comparatively short period necessary to reduce our strength to the required limit, and then continue on the preparatory and Cadet Companies' system; but above all working on the old lines, and with unity of command. In the meantime, our recruiting was stopped, and I had personally to apply for leave to take any man I desired for special reasons to enlist, but I was told that as soon as our numbers were reduced to the new establishment we should be at liberty to recruit again. An unfortunate step towards reduction was taken about the end of February. We were told to ascertain how many men would be ready to take artillery commissions, and 178 gave in their names. Two officers from the War Office came down to interview them, and rejected the greater number, not only for artillery commissions, but as being fit for commissions at all, and we were ordered to transfer the rejected men as privates to other units. The whole proceeding had taken under five hours, being at the rate of about 1½ minutes per man. The questions asked had, as before, nothing to do with their military requirements, but, as before, referred to their schools, occupation, and in some cases parentage. Rejection for that particular arm on the ground of want of any sort of technical knowledge would have been, of course, quite reasonable, but such rejection worked particularly unfairly, as the men in question were mostly up for infantry commissions, and many had been selected by C.O.'s. They had only offered themselves for artillery as a chance of getting quicker to the front. A storm of protest from their relatives naturally followed. I made strong representations to the authority concerned, and was told the cases might be reconsidered, then that they could not be reconsidered. Mr. Redmond interested himself in one, and his rejection was cancelled, then others. Questions were asked in the House, and eventually the transfers were not insisted on. About the same time we were ordered to transfer 139 men under 18 to the 101st Provisional Battalion without prejudice to their claim to commissioned rank. It proved, however, a mistake to mix up boys of that age with the ordinary private, and eventually they were re-transferred to the Corps. Meanwhile, our commissions reached 5,000, and we now had four Cadet Companies, each of 100 men, added to our establishment. They were all commanded by regular officers attached for that purpose. Major Bromfield commanded No. 1 Cadet Company, Captain Gompertz No. 2, Captain Busfield No. 3, and Captain Loyd No. 4. We gave them some of our best officers—Cave, E. Clarke, Bond, Ledward and Houghton—and did our utmost to make them a success.

Although these incidents and the threatened changes naturally caused some unrest in the Corps, it was surprisingly little, and the normal life flowed steadily on. The Irishmen celebrated St. Patrick's Day by a dinner at the Crown, and on St. David's Day the Welshmen gave us an excellent concert. Boxing became more and more a feature of the Y.M.C.A., and on Easter Monday and again in July we had regimental sports. Various school O.T.C.'s visited us for fielddays from time to time. In March we had Eton, Harrow, Westminster, Merchant Taylors, and Berkhamsted; and in June, Harrow, St. Paul's, Mill Hill, Highgate, Merchant Taylors, Westminster, Aldenham, and Berkhamsted. We went on our own system of letting an operation work itself out, and the boys acquitted themselves well, the difficulty being to check their propensity to run the whole time. Harrow were our most constant friends, and we sometimes tried them rather high. On one occasion they came on trek and asked for a night show, so we lay out all night and assaulted their bivouac on the common at dawn. A night of alarms between two heavy days was no light test for boys, some on the smaller side, but they stood it manfully. The Berkhamsted school O.T.C. was admirably trained and commanded by Major Parsons, who also took a prominent part in local affairs, and gave us his whole-hearted support in a variety of ways.

By the end of April it looked as if we had arrived at a satisfactory understanding with the War Office. Sir Alfred Goodson, who had interested himself in our recruiting and had already done us excellent service in that direction, now took charge under Major Hay of the recruiting side of the Corps carried on at the dépôt. Being myself by nature somewhat tongue-tied, and handicapped in dealing with superior officers by a strong sense of discipline, we arranged that Sir Alfred Goodson should see the War Office authorities on behalf of what may be called our civilian supporters and try to get some definite scheme. He had an interview with Mr. Tennant and representatives of S.D.i., and arrived at an arrangement on our behalf, which, if adhered to, would have worked well. It was on the following lines: (1) The future establishment of the Corps to be 2,000, including four Cadet Companies; (2) Until the numbers were reduced to 2,000, a fifth Cadet Company of extra strength (say 250) to be allowed; (3) When numbers were down to 2,000, the old right of selection of recruits would revive; (4) No man to be rejected except by me. Unity of command was implied, and our main anxieties appeared to be practically over; but owing to the method, convenient in many ways, of dealing with important matters verbally, it sometimes happened that if a particular officer left the War Office, his successor was not well aware of what had gone before; we had to begin all over again, and from a different point of view. The officer concerned left the War Office soon after the interview, and we found ourselves again on the rocks. Sir Alfred Goodson did his utmost for us, and was then and always indefatigable in our service; but as the establishment of the various Cadet Schools was proceeded with, our somewhat abnormal position stood out more abruptly. The Cadet Schools were mainly commanded by wounded regular officers, and were generally run, so far as my information went, as miniature Sandhursts, their primary objects being to assimilate the new officer to the old in routine, in smartness of appearance, and in knowledge of drill. In the hands of a badly wounded or otherwise handicapped officer, the school would naturally tend to barrack-square methods, very far removed from our views and methods of fostering self-reliance and moral. But there was no real dissonance in the ultimate objects to be attained, though the methods might be different, and there was room for all. However, a general system had been established, and unless the engagement was adhered to that we should stand outside it, and retain our individuality as one complete and final training unit, it was evident we should be brought into the same shape. Nor had we long to wait. Discussions as to our new establishment continued, always on the footing of unity of command, and of our retaining our own special place as a training corps. About the middle of June, however, I was sent for to the War Office, and in about ten minutes the whole of the recruiting machinery we had so laboriously built up was scrapped by the shutting down of our dépôt, with the result gravely to affect the Corps organisation, and to cut off entirely the supply of overseas men.

Our Adjutant, Captain A. L. Bonham Carter now left us. He had been wounded, but had recovered and was glad of the opportunity of getting back to his regiment, and then to France. Major Sinclair Thomson, from the Suffolk Regiment, took his place. Meanwhile, in accordance with orders, No. 6 Company, which included all the recruits at the dépôt, came down under Mathews, with Sergeant Vassila, an excellent staff sergeant, who had been with us many years, as C.S.M.

In July we had a great loss, our medical officer, Captain McManus, leaving us. He was not only most efficient in his work, but had thrown himself into the life of the Corps with the greatest zest and enjoyment. The reason for his going forms an interesting example of medical esprit de corps. Two or three of our men returning from a hospital, complained to me of the food and treatment they had received. After hearing their stories, I thought it a matter at least for investigation, and wrote to the Command concerned accordingly. The medical authorities enquired into the question, and I was informed there was nothing in it. This seemed to conclude the matter, but immediately afterwards McManus was ordered to transfer to another unit. I wrote at once to say that he had in no way been concerned in the complaints in question, for which I alone was responsible, and that he was of the greatest use to us. We were informed, however, that his transfer had nothing to do with the matter in question, but was in accordance with his suggested desire to go overseas! All that remained to be said could only be said inwardly, and because I had ventured to touch the sensitive nerve of medical self-appreciation, McManus had, greatly to our detriment, to go.

There soon followed, and in a curiously haphazard fashion, that break in the unity of the Corps which we had tried hard to prevent. The Senior Officer of the Cadet Companies, who was a major in the regular army, asked me casually one day if I had any objection to his applying to be made temporary Lieut.-Colonel in order that he might get the pay and allowance of that rank. I said at first I had none, but on thinking it over told him I could not accept his proposal as it might well interfere with my position as commanding the whole Corps. About a fortnight later, and without any warning, I found this officer gazetted as Lieut.-Colonel while in command of the Inns of

THE CORPS (1ST JANUARY TO 1ST SEPTEMBER, 1916).

Court Cadet Battalion. I was informed that it would make no difference in the command, but was only a matter of pay and routine. Obviously, however, the four Cadet Companies, being now assumed to form a Cadet Battalion under a Lieut.-Colonel, could only be nominally under my command, and were certain to become more and more (as they did) an independent unit. It is unthinkable that an officer would put up, or persevere in, an application to which his C.O. had objected, and I had to recognise that this appointment, coupled with the closing of our dépôt, indicated a re-organisation of the Corps on a footing inconsistent with the methods of training we had hitherto employed. It also made it clear to me that my term of usefulness was coming to an end, and that the rumours that came down from the Cadet Companies that I should soon be leaving were probably well-founded.

On the 1st August the Corps had the great honour and pleasure of a visit from the King. His Majesty, who had expressed a desire to see the Corps at its ordinary work, arrived at 3 p.m., and remained over an hour. He first saw some sword exercise by the Squadron, bayonet fighting, Nos. 2 and 6 Companies at drill, and No. 5 at musketry, all in Kitchener's Field. He then went in McLean's car on to the Common, where the Cadet Companies were practising trench fighting, and No. 1 Company bombing, and thence to the Squadron jumps. From there he walked through Frithsden Beeches, where Nos. 3 and 4 Companies were practising wood fighting. Much to His Majesty's amusement, attack and counter-attack always seemed to culminate where His Majesty happened to be standing. He rejoined his car on the road, and was graciously pleased to express himself well satisfied with what he had seen. The parade state was 2,223, and the only contretemps that occurred is referred to in the following letter from the King's Equerry:—

“BUCKINGHAM PALACE,
2nd August, 1916.

“My dear Colonel Errington,

The King was very glad to have an opportunity yesterday of seeing the Inns of Court Officers Training Corps, and of showing his appreciation of the excellent work being done by this Corps, whose record since the beginning of the war speaks for itself.

His Majesty thought that all your arrangements were well planned and carried out.

I am afraid that on our return journey we took the wrong road into Berkhamsted, and so missed the troops which were lined up along the road. The fact was that those excellent signposts which you had provided to direct us on our arrival had withdrawn, and the chauffeur apparently went straight on when he ought to have turned to the right.

I am sorry that this should have happened, as it would have given the King much pleasure to have seen the men lined up along the road.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed), CLIVE WIGRAM.”

On the 15th August, I received a private communication from the Director-General of the Territorial Force, Sir Edward Bethune, that after the work I had done he thought I ought to have a chance of going to France, and offering me the appointment of Base Commandant to one of the Territorial Divisions. He added that he offered me this as he gathered the Chief of the Staff rather wanted to get a man in charge of the O.T.C. who had later experience of the fighting in France. Although we were now directly under the General Staff, and not the Territorial Force, I, of course, took this kindly hint. I was rapidly drifting into an impossible position, having either to accept a cramped form of training in which I thoroughly disbelieved, or to risk the future of the Corps by putting up a fight over what would soon be made to appear to be my personal position. I accepted the offer, and on the 21st was appointed Base Commandant to the 58th Division, then standing by to go overseas. I left Berkhamsted on the 1st September, deeply grieved, indeed, at quitting the old Corps in which I had served for thirty-five years, but proud at having been allowed to share in the days of its greatest achievement, and confident that its fine traditions remained in safe keeping. Not only officers representing pre-war days, Major Mead, Major Hay, Major Sir Frederic Kenyon, Captains McLean, Field, Mathews, Bergne, Geare, Buller, Cave, Clarke, Parkinson, and Merriman, but also magnificent material we had taken since the war, Poyser, Greene, Brett, Foster, Stapylton, Bond, Ledward, Horne, Dane, Foot, West, Bamford, Cow, C. N. Hooper, C. E. L. Hooper, Fisher, Johnston, Brightman, Houghton, Paterson, Teesdale, Haward still remained and formed together a body of men of unsurpassed and unsurpassable efficiency; so long as they, or officers imbued with the same spirit were there, whatever particular form of training the Corps would have to undertake, there was no fear of its falling from its high reputation.

The following appeared in Corps Orders of the 1st September:—“In vacating the command of the Corps for the purpose of taking up an appointment with one of the Divisions proceeding overseas, the Commanding Officer wishes to express his appreciation of the loyal support he has received from all ranks during his period of Command. It has been entirely due to this loyal co-operation that the Corps has been able to establish a war record of unique interest, and to do work second to none in determining the successful issue of this war. The Commanding Officer is very proud to have been in command of the Corps during these strenuous days; he feels sure that under his successor the Corps will remain at the same high level of endeavour and achievement.”

Chapter VII.

THE CORPS (1ST SEPTEMBER 1916 TO 1ST OCTOBER 1917).

The lecture which Colonel Errington gave to the Corps on the eve of his departure will long be remembered by those who were privileged to hear it. Until that afternoon few knew of his impending departure, and most of us heard of it for the first time at this lecture. The news created a great sensation, and everyone realised that the finest chapter in the long history of the Corps was drawing to a conclusion. It was not surprising, therefore, to find all available officers, warrant officers, N.C.O.'s and men present outside the station on the following day to give him a great send-off.

The Adjutant, Major Sinclair Thomson, returned from a visit to the War Office with the information that he had been definitely selected to succeed Colonel Errington. The appointment of an Adjutant therefore became urgent, and later in the month Major Cockburn, of the Suffolk Regiment, was selected for the post.

Some time before Colonel Errington left, the Cadet Companies had been drawn more and more away from the Corps, and the War Office now decided to form them into a separate Battalion, and to reconstitute the Corps on an establishment of four Companies. On September 5th, the new Cadet Battalion, No. 14 (Inns of Court) O.C.B., was formed, and the following Inns of Court Officers posted to it, viz. :—Captains W. T. C. Cave and E. C. K. Clarke, Lieutenants J. C. Ledward, C. G. Houghton, and A. L. Brightman, with Lieutenant H. T. H. Bond as Adjutant. On the same day T. W. Haward received a commission in the Corps and was posted to No. 2 Company in which he had previously served as a sergeant.

The following officers of other regiments had been attached to the Cadet Companies whilst they formed part of the Corps :—

On September 7th, the commissions granted to members of the Corps reached 5,700.

Colonel Sinclair Thomson was frequently called to the War Office at this time on questions relating to the new establishment of the Corps. It was, at first, proposed to disband the Squadron, but with the aid of friends of the Corps, the Commanding Officer succeeded in keeping it alive although in a much reduced form. The Corps re-opened for infantry recruits on September 14th, and on the following day a Riding School for Infantry Officers was started, much to the amusement of their friends in the Squadron. On the same day (September 15th), the Commanding Officer, who had obtained in our draft establishment provision for a band, appointed a small Committee to organise it. The Private Funds Committee made advances of £280 for the purchase of instruments, and of £20 for preliminary expenses.

THE CORPS (1ST SEPTEMBER 1916 TO 1ST OCTOBER 1917).

The Commanding Officer was fortunate in finding in C.Q.M.S. Payne, a very capable and experienced bandmaster. With the assistance of Messrs. Hawkes, Payne interviewed a number of C2 and C3 men and made his selection quickly. The men were enlisted, and trained very rapidly, and less than a month later the Band held its opening concert in one of the Company huts.

Forty of the Squadron horses were returned on September 16th to Remounts preparatory to the reduction in establishment.

Our new Adjutant, Major R. Cockburn, Suffolk Regiment, arrived on September 25th and assumed duty as Adjutant.

On September 29th the number of commissions granted to the Corps reached 6,000.

Captain F. M. S. Cassel, K.C.—a former member of the Corps—was appointed Judge Advocate General on October 6th.

On October 12th, 13th and 14th, the Band gave its opening concerts in Kitsbury Huts, the first for the Corps, the second for No. 14 (Inns of Court) O.C.B., and the third for the Residents in Berkhamsted.

About this time it became very cold and windy in Camp. Papers in the Orderly Room were scattered by wind or got covered with dust, and the Staff were much relieved when the Orderly Room was moved on October 16th to its new quarters in Keys Timber Yard, where it remained until demobilisation in July, 1919. During the autumn hostile air raids were frequent, and in order to be available at short notice at night, I obtained a billet near the timber yard. There I slept with a string tied round my arm, the other end of it hanging out of the window down to the ground. Whenever an air raid took place after I had gone to bed, one of the guard awakened me by pulling this string, more or less gently, according to the state of his nerves. On one occasion the sentry mistook the path and fell into the pond, and it became unnecessary for him to pull the string! On another occasion a stray dog became entangled in the string and nearly pulled my arm off. I blessed the supposed sentry, dressed and proceeded to the Orderly Room, only to find that nothing had been heard of an air raid!

On October 24th, Colonel Braine and Colonel Riley visited us to consider the future of the Squadron.

On October 28th, the six Companies were re-organised as "A," "B," "C," and "D" Companies, and on the same day the Inns of Court team finished third out of 20 teams in a military cross-country race at Eltham.

During October two of the Squadron officers, Lieutenants J. E. Johnston and C. S. Johnson, transferred to other units. The Corps moved into billets on November 1st, and on the 7th there was a mounted paper chase for officers, which created much excitement and not a little anxiety in the Officers' Mess.

On November 13th, Poyser, who had done so much good work in the Machine Gun School in the Castle Ground, transferred to the Machine Gun Corps at Grantham. There was a good deal of sickness in the Corps about this time, and the Adjutant, Quartermaster and R.S.M. were all on the sick list together.

At the end of November, P.M. Walters, who had been appointed to a commission in the Corps earlier in the month, was transferred to No. 14 (Inns of Court) O.C.B.

On December 6th the Squadron, consisting of 2 officers, 43 other ranks, with 49 horses, moved to Maresfield Park. The Band played them to the station to the tune of "Nancy Dawson," and the whole of the Infantry turned out and gave them a great send-off.

On December 8th, Captain R. F. C. O'Brien rejoined the Corps after service overseas.

An order was published on December 14th, increasing the rates payable for Class I. billets. This was read in the Corps and in some other units, as applying to Class II. billets. As a result, increased payments were made to the inhabitants of Berkhamsted and a great sensation was caused when six weeks later the mistake was discovered. Steps were then taken to recover the over-payments, but by War Office order this recovery was stopped. The amounts overpaid were disallowed in the various Company Pay and Mess Books, and it was not until early in 1919 that these disallowances were wiped out.

On December 14th, we had a change of Chaplains, the Rev. E. R. Chamney, C.F., relieving the Rev. A. S. Woodward, C.F. The new padre had previously been attached to the Gunners, and managed to bring with him his horse, saddlery, etc.—a very useful addition to our stable.

On December 15th the number of commissions granted reached 7,000.

On December 18th, Major Hay rejoined the Corps from the Dépôt in Lincoln's Inn, being relieved by Captain Foster.

From December 21st to 27th, 80% of the Corps had Christmas leave.

On January 5th the Director of Staff Duties at the War Office (General Bird), visited Berkhamsted.

Early in the month the Corps was asked to find men for a new branch of the Machine Gun Corps. The requirements were knowledge of motors, or machine guns, and height under average.

On January 25th the Squadron's new establishment was promulgated (A.C.I. 105 of 1917), and the name changed to "The Mounted Detachment, Inns of Court O.T.C."

With a view to stimulating recruiting, etc., a large number of Press Representatives were invited to Berkhamsted on January 22nd. In the morning they witnessed the Corps at Training (specially arranged). In the afternoon there was a Boxing Tournament, followed by a dinner in the Officers' Mess, and a Band Concert. The whole entertainment was a great success, and the Press correspondents thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Late in the afternoon, however, a telegram from the War Office was received stopping all recruiting for the Corps until further order!

On January 29th, 13 attached N.C.O.'s reported for duty. Most of them were useless as instructors, and within a fortnight 10 of them had been returned to their units.

Early in February it was found that Foster could not adequately perform at the same time the duties of O.C. Recruiting Depôt in London and O.i/c Messing at Berkhamsted, and accordingly he was relieved by Lieutenant G. F. T. Horne of his duties as O.i/c Messing.

On February 24th it was notified that the services of Lieutenant-Colonel F. H. L. Errington and Captains McLean and Foster had been brought to the notice of the Secretary of State for War, and the same day Major and Quartermaster W. Holbourn was selected for a reward for Distinguished or Meritorious Service. A few days later a similar notification was made as to the services of R.S.M. A. Burns, of the Scots Guards, C.S.M. B. Perks, and O.R.C/S. Brock.

About this time the Mounted Detachment left Maresfield Park for Tidworth, for attachment to another Reserve Regiment of Cavalry.

On March 10th we played football against the Artists at Queen's Club, and were beaten by 3 goals to 2.

In the early part of the month, Major Mead left Berkhamsted on posting to a Labour Company for service overseas, and Captain Mathews left to take a Siege Artillery Course preparatory to posting to the R.G.A.

About this time we had a large number of men sick with measles or German measles. Training and the provision of drafts to cadet units were considerably interfered with in consequence. Notwithstanding this, on the 13th March a draft of 83 men was sent to join the R.F.C. Training School at Reading.

On March 18th the Band played in London, and on the 19th the Chaplain-General visited us and gave an address in the Parish Church.

On the 20th there was a Field Day on the Common with Harrow, Eton, Berkhamsted, Forest School, and No. 14 (Inns of Court) O.C.B.

On Easter Monday (April 9th) there were Battalion Sports in Kitchener's Field, several of the events being thrown open to No. 14 O.C.B. Late in the afternoon there was a heavy fall of snow, and the wintry weather continued for three more days. However, after one or two postponements the Corps moved into Camp on April 23rd. On the same day the "Hades Herald" was published. About this time Miss Blount, who, as Commandant of the V.A.D., had done so much to make the Beeches Hospital a very successful Corps Hospital, felt the need of a rest and resigned her appointment, and she was succeeded by Mrs. Porter.

On April 26th there was a ceremonial parade of the Corps and No. 14 O.C.B., in Kitchener's Field, for the presentation of medals by Brig.-General J. E. Bush, C.B., Commanding the troops at Halton Park.

Captain R. F. C. O'Brien left Berkhamsted on May 2nd on posting to the Roughriders. On the same day Lieutenant W. W. Allsopp was appointed Quartermaster vice Major Holbourn. The latter had had much trouble with his eyes for some time previously, and on May 29th he resigned his commission.

General Sir F. S. Robb visited the Corps on May 16th, and five days later General Sir William Robertson and Lieutenant-General Sir F. S. Maurice also visited us.

On May 17th the number of commissions was 8,000, and on the same day Lieutenant J. H. Hutcheson (11th A. and S. Hrs.) reported for duty as an attached officer, and a fortnight later Captain Aylwin, M.C., similarly reported.

On May 20th the Band gave a Concert at the Queen's Hall, in London, and on June 8th played in Trafalgar Square.

On May 23rd, Lieutenant J. H. Fisher left the Mounted Detachment at Tidworth for duty with the War Trade Intelligence Department.

On June 1st, Lieutenant A. C. C. Parkinson left for duty under the Colonial Office.

On June 7th notification was received that Captain J. G. Herring-Cooper, Leicester Regiment, had been appointed Adjutant vice Major Cockburn. He reported on the 15th, and the following day was sick and was admitted to the Beeches Hospital, where he found Major Cockburn, and it was not until June 24th that they had sufficiently recovered for the formal handing over to take place.

On June 15th the V.C. was awarded to a former member of the Corps, 2nd Lieutenant John Harrison, M.C., E. Yorks. Regiment. The following appeared in Corps Orders of that date:—

"Honours.

"The King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the Victoria Cross to the following officer:

"T/2nd Lieutenant John Harrison, M.C., E. Yorks. Regiment (formerly No. 7203 No. 4 Company and No. 4 Cadet Company). For most conspicuous bravery and self-sacrifice in an attack. Owing to darkness and to smoke from the enemy barrage, and from our own, and to the fact that our objective was in a dark wood, it was impossible to see when our barrage had lifted off the enemy front line. Nevertheless, Second Lieutenant Harrison led his Company against the enemy trench under heavy rifle and machine-gun fire, but was repulsed. Reorganizing his command as best he could in No Man's Land, he again attacked in darkness under terrific fire, but with no success. Then, turning round, this gallant officer, single-handed, made a dash at the machine-gun, hoping to knock out the gun and so save the lives of many of his Company. His self-sacrifice and absolute disregard of danger was an inspiring example to all."

THE CORPS (1st SEPTEMBER 1916 TO 1st OCTOBER 1917).

"He enlisted in the Inns of Court O.T.C. on November 4th, 1915, and was appointed to a commission in the East Yorkshire Regiment on August 4th, 1916. He was granted the Military Cross on April 17th, 1917. All ranks will regret to hear that he is now reported missing (believed killed)."

On June 16th, R.S.M. Johnstone arrived to relieve R.S.M. Burns.

On June 20th, Major General C. G. A. Egerton, C.B., visited the Corps, and on June 26th General Lowther also visited us.

On June 25th, Lieutenant C. N. Hooper left the Corps for duty in East Africa.

On July 2nd, Major Cockburn left us on posting to the M.G.C. at Grantham. When he came to Berkhamsted he was suffering from a badly shattered arm, and he made little or no improvement whilst with us. I never heard him complain, but when he sent for his horse, "Mary," and went for a ride, it was generally a sign that the pain was unbearable. He worked hard for the Corps in many ways, but perhaps his interest in boxing was most generally known—certainly the revival of it was mainly due to his efforts. His departure after an Adjutancy of nine months was greatly regretted by those who knew him best.

On July 5th, R.S.M. Burns left to rejoin the Scots Guards, and on the previous day the following announcement appeared in Corps Orders:—

"Regimental-Sergeant-Major Burns, A.

"R.S.M. Burns is leaving to-morrow to rejoin his unit, the Scots Guards.

"The Commanding Officer takes this opportunity of placing on record his appreciation of the past services R.S.M. Burns has rendered to the Inns of Court O.T.C., and feels that he is expressing the sentiment of all ranks in wishing him every success for the future."

Everyone who served in the Corps whilst Burns was R.S.M., knows what a factor he was in the success of the training which men received in the Corps. How invaluable in the Orderly Room was his extensive knowledge of regulations, orders, etc., is perhaps only known to those whose duties took them there.

On July 17th the construction of the labyrinth in Kitchener's Field was commenced.

On July 29th the Bishop of London visited us and preached at the Parade Service.

On July 31st the number of commissions granted had risen to 8,500.

About this time it was decided that officers attached to the Inns of Court O.T.C. should receive 2s. per day extra duty pay, but officers of the Inns of Court O.T.C. were not to be entitled to this. Unofficially the distinction was supported in several ways, but each in turn was proved to be untenable, but no change was made.

On August 11th, "The Gehenna Gazette" was published and created much amusement. Another change of padres took place on the 15th, the Rev. E. R. Chamney, C.F., being relieved by the Rev. J. J. Griffin, C.F.

A few days later there was much satisfaction in the Officers' Mess over a large number of promotions, some of them dating back—with pay—for several months.

About this time the War Office decided that candidates for commissions in the Infantry should be inspected by Officers from the War Office in the same way as candidates for R.F.A., R.E., and other technical branches. Similar inspections by the War Office had been tried earlier in the war, and had been abandoned, and it was not surprising, therefore, to find that these inspections were soon dropped also.

On August 24th, Brig.-General A. Symonds, C.M.G. (D.D.S.D.) visited the Corps, and on the same day the Corps was attached to the 5th Training Reserve Brigade at St. Albans for supervision of training, discipline and local administration.

On September 17th, General Mackenzie visited us.

On September 29th, Morris and Hawksley were given commissions in the Corps.

On October 1st, Colonel Sinclair Thomson relinquished command of the Corps, and the following announcement appeared in Corps Orders:—

"Command.

"Lieut.-Colonel Sinclair Thomson, on relinquishing command, wishes to take this opportunity of thanking all officers, warrant officers, N.C.O.'s and men for their loyal co-operation and assistance during his period of command.

"He regrets that he, through force of circumstances, is unable personally to thank all those to whom thanks are due, but he knows that they will always continue to uphold all those fine qualities and traditions of which the Corps is justly proud.

"The fact that he has had the honour to command the Inns of Court O.T.C. for over a year, during the period of the war, will ever remain one of the most pleasant memories of his life."

Colonel Sinclair Thomson succeeded to the command at a very difficult time. He was proud of the history of the Corps, keenly alive to its interests, and the Corps had in him a very real friend.

Chapter VIII.

THE CORPS (1ST OCTOBER 1917 TO 27TH JULY 1919).

A few hours after Colonel Sinclair Thomson left, his successor, Lieutenant Colonel H. L. Stevens, D.S.O., the Welch Regiment, arrived and assumed command. The same evening a cow fell into the labyrinth and was killed. I ought to add that the Court of Inquiry found that it died in an attempt to escape from an aeroplane (believed to be hostile) which flew over Kitchener's Field that night.

On October 22nd, General Sir H. H. Wilson, who had recently been appointed to the Eastern Command, visited the Corps.

On October 24th the Corps moved from Camp into billets.

During November, Major Kenyon left for duty with the Graves Registration and Inquiries Commission. Lieutenant Dane transferred to the M.G. Corps at Grantham, Paterson for duty with the R.F.C., and West for duty at the Ministry of Food.

On November 20th the number of commissions granted reached 9,000.

On November 30th a reorganization of the Training Companies took place.

About this time we were frequently called upon to supply guards for aeroplanes which landed in the neighbourhood, generally on very cold nights.

From December 21st to December 27th, 80% of the Corps went away for Christmas leave.

In the New Year Honours, published on January 1st, 1918, I was promoted to a Brevet Majority.

On January 2nd, General Symons, D.D.S.D., visited us again.

On January 4th, the Rev. H. S. Martin, C.F., relieved the Rev. J. J. Griffin, C.F.

On January 10th, Captain Bergne was appointed O. i/c Messing vice Lieutenant G. F. T. Horne, who returned to duty with "B" Company. Captain Aylwin, M.C., took over command of "A" Company, and Lieutenant C. E. L. Hooper became "Bombs" vice Aylwin.

On January 11th the Corps ceased to be attached to the 5th Training Reserve Brigade at St. Albans and became attached to the 4th Training Reserve Brigade at Northampton for similar purposes, and on the 15th we received a visit from our new Brigadier, Brigadier-General H. C. de la M. Hill, C.M.G., and his Brigade Major, Major Greenway.

On January 22nd, No. 14 O.C.B. left Berkhamsted for Catterick, and a School of Instruction for Officer Instructors in Cadet Battalions was formed at Berkhamsted, under command of Colonel Williams.

In Army Orders for January the minimum age for enlistment in the Corps was reduced to 18 years 1 month (A.O. 35 of 1918).

For some time past it had become more and more difficult to purchase supplies out of the money allowance in lieu of rations, and early this month it was decided to draw rations in lieu of the money allowance, and the change took place on January 26th.

About this time the Commanding Officer had several inquiries as to the possibility of replacing part of the employed men by members of the W.A.A.C.; and Miss Wilkins—the Area Controller—visited the Corps on January 11th to investigate.

On January 28th, General Pilcher visited the Corps and saw training being carried out.

On February 2nd, the Annual General Meeting of the Corps took place. Nearly everyone forgot it, and a quorum was obtained by searching diligently in the various Company Orderly Rooms, etc. The same day Lieutenant-Colonel Hewlett, D.S.O., S.D.4., visited us.

On February 7th, Captain M. Sayers, D.C.M., reported for duty as an attached officer, and was posted to "D" Company.

On February 14th, the V.C. was awarded to Captain W. N. Stone, a former member of the Corps.

The following announcement appeared in Corps Orders:—

"Honours.

"His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the award of the Victoria Cross to:—

"Lieutenant (Acting Captain) Walter Napleton Stone, late Royal Fusiliers.

"Captain Stone enlisted in the Inns of Court O.T.C., on 9th November, 1914, and was posted to "A" Company. At the end of December, 1914, he passed into the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, and was in due course gazetted to the Royal Fusiliers.

"The deed for which this posthumous honour has been awarded is thus described in the 'London Gazette,' of 13th February, 1918:—'For most conspicuous bravery when in command of a Company in an isolated position 1,000 yards in front of the main line, and overlooking the enemy's position. He observed the enemy massing for an attack, and afforded invaluable information to battalion headquarters. He was ordered to withdraw his Company, leaving a rearguard to cover the withdrawal. The attack developing with unexpected speed, Captain Stone sent three platoons back and remained with the rearguard himself. He stood on the parapet with the telephone under a tremendous bombardment, observing the enemy, and continued to send back valuable information until the wire was cut by his orders. The rearguard was eventually surrounded and cut to pieces, and Captain Stone was seen fighting to the last, till he was shot through the head. The extraordinary coolness of this heroic officer and the accuracy of his information enabled dispositions to be made just in time to save the line and avert disaster.' "

On February 15th the O.T.C. Selection Board was formed at Lincoln's Inn, under the Presidency of Sir Alfred Goodson. Captain Foster became the senior military member of the Board, and an officer of the Artists' Rifles became the third member.

The visits of inspecting officers were so numerous about this time that it was considered necessary to prepare different "stunts" to suit the varied tastes of these officers. In one case the letters on trees, gates, etc. (sometimes used for judging distance and similar practices) were whitewashed afresh shortly before one of these inspections. I find that in my diary that night there is a note to the effect that whitewash—to be really effective—should at least be dry before the Inspecting Officer arrives.

About this time there was a shortage of foodstuffs of all kinds, and members of the Corps were encouraged to grow potatoes and vegetables of all kinds. Plots were marked out in the Camp Field and near the Gymnasium, and R.Q.M.S. Langridge was ever ready to assist members with advice or to help them by procuring the necessary implements and seed. Colonel Stevens devoted a great deal of his spare time to the cultivation of a large allotment.

On February 19th, Colonel Earle (S.D.3) visited us.

On February 20th, a Board considered a proposed Field Firing Range for the Corps near Ivinghoe.

On February 21st, Captain Aylwin left the Corps on return to the 3rd Bedfordshire Regiment, and Captain A. R. Wallis took over command of "A" Company.

On March 4th, the number of commissions granted reached 9,500.

On March 6th, the Inns of Court team was third in a Military Cross-Country Race at Epsom Downs, being beaten by the Canadian Machine Gun Regiment first, and the London Rifle Brigade second. The 4th Reserve Regiment of Cavalry was fourth.

For some time past Captain Herring-Cooper had become more and more anxious to return to his regiment, and on March 8th he received instructions to return to the 3rd Leicesters. I was offered a recommendation for the appointment, and though I had refused it on previous occasions, I now felt that I could with, perhaps, some advantage to the Corps, accept the offer, and when Captain Herring-Cooper left I was appointed Adjutant in his place. A few days later Lieutenant T. W. Haward was appointed Assistant-Adjutant.

About the same time R.S.M. Johnstone was discharged to pension, and C.S.M. Vassila appointed acting R.S.M.

On the 19th March the Area Controller, W.A.A.C., again visited us to revise her estimate, and it became obvious that we could not much longer prevent the arrival of the W.A.A.C.'s, even if we wished to do so.

On March 23rd, notification was received that the services of the following had been brought to the notice of the Secretary of State for War, viz.:—Lieutenant Colonel G. A. L. Sinclair Thomson, Major Sir F. G. Kenyon, K.C.B., Captain H. T. H. Bond, C.S.M. A. H. Birks, and Orderly-Room-Sergeant F. C. Arden. Sergeant Arden had succeeded Colour-Sergeant Brock as Orderly-Room Sergeant when the latter left some months previously, and perhaps I may be permitted to record here how much of the efficiency of the Orderly Room was due to these Orderly-Room Sergeants. Colour-Sergeant Brock had an extraordinary good memory and was a very rapid worker, and these qualities were exactly what was required in the early part of the war. Sergeant Arden, on the other hand, relied on carefully kept records and filing systems, which again was exactly what was necessary in the later period of the war.

On March 21st, Lieutenant W. G. G. Leveson-Gower transferred to the Coldstream Guards.

On March 22nd, Harrow School O.T.C. visited us for a battle exercise on the Common.

Sir Arthur Yapp, K.B.E., visited Berkhamsted on March 27th, and gave an address in the Y.M.C.A. Hut.

During the first three or four months of the year, influenza and broncho-pneumonia was very prevalent, and at least six members of the Corps died.

On April 5th, Lieutenant G. F. T. Horne transferred to the 4th D.C.L.I., and Lieutenant P. E. Hawksley to the 3rd Bn. Norfolk Regiment.

On April 8th, Captain P. M. Walters rejoined from No. 14 O.C.B.

On April 10th, General Lynden Bell, D.S.D., visited us. On the same day the Inns of Court team finished first in the Military Cross-Country Race of the Southern Counties C.C.A., the M.G.C. (Cavalry) were 2nd, and the 9th (Reserve) Australian Battalion 3rd.

On April 18th, Lieutenant C. E. L. Hooper became O. i/c Messing vice Captain E. à C. Bergne, who transferred to the Inland Waterways and Docks Section R.E., and a few days later Lieutenant A. J. B. Bamford transferred to the M.G.C., Grantham.

On April 29th, the Corps moved into Camp—for the last time, and the following day saw the new Field Firing Range at Ivinghoe used for the first time. The construction of this range was largely due to the energy of the Musketry Officer, Captain S. Brett.

THE CORPS (1ST OCTOBER 1917 TO 27TH JULY 1919).

Late in 1917, Captain Buller had been largely instrumental in starting in "D" Company a very successful War Savings Association, and early in 1918 it was reconstituted as a Regimental Association. It rapidly became the most successful association in the Army, and by the end of April it had collected £32,746, the next most successful Association being that of the Household Brigade, O.C.B., which by the same date had collected £17,600. The Association received the thanks and congratulations of Sir Robert Kindersley, K.B.E., Chairman of the War Savings Association.

On May 7th the V.C. was awarded to Lieutenant-Colonel C. Bushell, D.S.O., a former member of the Corps. The following is a copy of the announcement in Corps Orders:—

"Honours.

"His Majesty the King has been pleased to approve of the award of the Victoria Cross to:

"Captain (Temporary Lieutenant-Colonel) Christopher Bushell, D.S.O., Royal West Surrey Regiment.

"Lieutenant-Colonel C. Bushell (formerly No. 544 "A" Company) enlisted in the Inns of Court O.T.C. on February 10th, 1911, and was discharged on May 8th, 1912, on appointment to a commission on the Supplementary List (Special Reserve) of the Queen's (R.W. Surrey) Regiment.

"He was reported wounded on December 12th, 1914, and has been twice mentioned in dispatches (January 4th, 1917, and December 18th, 1917). He was awarded the D.S.O. on January 1st, 1918.

"The deed for which the Victoria Cross was awarded is described in the 'London Gazette' of May 3rd, as follows:—

"For most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty when in command of his battalion.

"Lieutenant-Colonel Bushell personally led "C" Company of his battalion, who were co-operating with an Allied Regiment in a counter attack in face of a very heavy machine-gun fire. In the course of this attack he was severely wounded in the head, but he continued to carry on, walking about in front of both English and Allied troops, encouraging and re-organising them. He refused even to have his wounds attended to until he had placed the whole line in a sound position and formed a defensive flank to meet a turning movement by the enemy. He then went to Brigade Headquarters and reported the situation, had his wound dressed, and returned to the firing line, which had come back a short distance. He visited every portion of the line, both English and Allied, in face of terrific machine-gun and rifle fire, exhorting the troops to remain where they were and to kill the enemy.

"In spite of his wounds, the gallant Officer refused to go to the rear, and had eventually to be removed to the dressing station in a fainting condition.

"To the magnificent example of energy, devotion and courage showed by their Commanding Officer, is attributed the fine spirit displayed, and the keen fight put up by his battalion, not only on the day in question, but on each succeeding day of the withdrawal."

Shortly afterwards Colonel Bushell came home on leave. He returned to the Front, and was killed almost immediately afterwards.

On June 15th, Captain A. E. A. Buller left the Corps for service in the East.

On June 21st the Corps took part in another battle exercise with Harrow and Berkhamsted Schools Contingents of the O.T.C.

On June 22nd a very successful Rifle Meeting was held at the Range on the Common. In addition to individual competition, there were battle practice competitions between platoons which was won by Sergeant Scoggins' platoon from "C" Company, and an inter-department shoot won, appropriately enough, by the musketry staff. In one of the earlier rounds there was an exciting struggle between the Orderly Room and the Q.M. Store—and particularly between the Adjutant and the R.Q.M.S.

On June 25th, Netherfield and Holly House were handed over to the Corps, and the Q.M. began to equip them as a W.A.A.C. Hostel.

On June 26th, Major Campbell refereed at a Boxing Tournament in the Castle Ground, and the Brigadier (Brigadier-General H. C. de la M. Hill, C.B., C.M.G.) attended and presented the prizes, and also those won at the Rifle Meeting.

About this time there was a serious epidemic of the so-called "Spanish" Influenza. Fortunately, the Medical Officer, Captain A. F. Flower, R.A.M.C., arranged to house all but the serious cases in marquees in one of the Camp fields, and the difficulties of accommodation were not so great as in the winter.

On July 8th, Captain Chetwynd Stapylton transferred to the Grenadier Guards, and Captain P. M. Walters took over command of "B" Company, and on the following day Captain Wallis handed over "A" Company to Captain C. J. Hardy, M.C.

On July 12th, the number of commissions reached 10,000.

On July 16th, Lieutenant E. W. Greene transferred to the 1st Herts.

On July 19th, Private J. Kerr, an old servant of the Corps, and more especially of the Squadron, died in Hospital from "Spanish" Influenza.

On August 3rd, Captain Geare transferred to the 3rd Rifle Brigade.

On August 14th it was reported that the services of the following had been brought to the notice of the Secretary of State for War, viz.:—Major J. A. Hay, T.D., Captain R. F. C. O'Brien, and Captain Chetwynd Stapylton.

THE CORPS (1ST OCTOBER 1917 TO 27TH JULY 1919).

About this time the Sergeant-Major of the Army Gymnastic Staff attached to the Corps wrote a pamphlet about the use of the bayonet, and to this the Commanding Officer wrote a preface. The pamphlet, unfortunately, did not meet with favour at the War Office, and a great deal of trouble was taken to recover all issued copies of the pamphlet, and most, if not all, of the copies were recovered and destroyed.

On August 22nd and 23rd we were delighted to have a visit from Lieutenant-Colonel H. W. Smith, D.S.O., a pre-war Adjutant of the Corps, and then in command of one of the Cadet Battalions at Fleet.

On August 23rd, Captain Brett left to join the Guards Machine-Gun Training Centre.

Battalion Sports were held on August 31st.

Captain Walters handed over to me the Treasurership of the War Savings Association on September 3rd.

On September 7th, an "Old Men's" Company ("E") was formed under Captain H. C. Bennett, M.C.

On September 21st news was received with very great regret of the death of Captain A. E. A. Buller, in Palestine, from dysentery.

On October 1st the total amount contributed to the War Savings Association of the Corps was £60,117 5s. 6d., including £10,000 in War Savings Certificates.

On October 12th the long-expected detachment of the Q.M.A.A.C. arrived.

About this time there was a further and serious outbreak of influenza. During the latter part of the month and the early part of November the Corps lost 14 members by death, including one Q.M.A.A.C., and one attached Sergeant.

On October 31st the Corps moved from camp into billets.

On November 5th, Captain Walters resigned his commission.

And on November 11th the Armistice was celebrated by a whole holiday. The Band paraded the High Street in the morning. The Q.M.A.A.C. official took her detachment for a route march, and on the return journey was met by many members of the Corps and attached N.C.O.'s. After a gallant resistance the detachment dissolved and went off with the men to celebrate the occasion, leaving the Administrator and her N.C.O. to return alone to Netherfield. That evening a great bonfire was made in Kitchener's Field, and little remained afterwards of the gallows and bayonet fighting sacks at the labyrinth. The Band broke into Holly House, but withdrew before any serious damage had been done. There was, in fact, very little disciplinary trouble then or afterwards.

After the Armistice, work was much reduced, and to a considerable extent gave way to education, sports and games. There is little in the subsequent history worth recording. There was a great struggle on behalf of many men to get on to the earlier demobilisation drafts, and towards the end some competition to keep off the drafts on the part of those who were quite content to draw pay as long as possible.

In the early months of 1919 the strength was rapidly reduced, and I wanted to stay at Berkhamsted until the Corps had been reduced to cadre. I had, however, suffered from time to time from abdominal trouble ever since September, 1914, and early in 1919 the cause was diagnosed. When the strength got below 50, further reduction became a very slow process, and as it became increasingly dangerous to defer longer an operation for appendicitis, I applied, very reluctantly, to be demobilised. On June 28th I handed over to Lieutenant L. T. Wootton, an attached officer who had been acting as Assistant Adjutant since the demobilisation of Lieutenant T. W. Haward, and on the same day I was demobilised.

The Cadre returned to Stone Buildings, Lincoln's Inn, on July 27th, 1919, when the war services of the Corps came to an end. The demobilisation of the Cadre and the return to his regiment of Colonel Stevens were not finally effected until October 25th, 1919.

The substitution by officers attached to the Corps from other regiments in place of our own officers began in May, 1917. In addition to the two Commanding Officers, their names are as follows:—

Capt. G. A. Angel	-	-	-	-	-	-	-	R. Fus.

Chapter IX.

THE DEPÔT.

The history of the depôt at Lincoln's Inn begins with the transfer of the Corps from London to Berkhamsted, in the month of September, 1914. The chief function of the depôt was the selection of candidates for admission to the Corps, but for a time recruits were clothed and armed there and received the first part of their training, and during this period the establishment at Lincoln's Inn carried on the work of an ordinary regimental depôt. At a later stage the recruits were sent down to Berkhamsted to join the Corps immediately after attestation, and the depôt was then concerned with little else than the business of recruiting. Recruiting involved two problems, namely, first, the attraction of candidates to the depôt, and secondly, the selection of suitable men from those who presented themselves, and, as will be seen hereafter, the tale of the depôt turns mainly on the methods adopted to solve these problems.

At the outbreak of war the Corps used for its Headquarters No. 10, Stone Buildings, Lincoln's Inn, consisting of a Drill Hall with orderly room, armoury and offices. As the war went on, the office work of the depôt increased so greatly that the accommodation at No. 10, Stone Buildings, soon became quite inadequate. The Benchers of Lincoln's Inn very kindly put practically all their vacant chambers at the disposal of the Corps, and at one time the work of the depôt was being carried on not only at the old Headquarters, but also in chambers at No. 7, No. 2, and No. 4, Stone Buildings, and at No. 12, Old Square. The Old Hall also was handed over to the Corps for lectures and other purposes during the period when recruit training was being carried on at Lincoln's Inn. Even the Law Courts were pressed into the service, and when the Central Hall was available it was used in bad weather. The gardens of the Inns were, of course, in constant use as training grounds, and their ancient lawns, the result of centuries of care, were completely ruined.

Before the war, membership of the Corps was open to barristers and bar students, and to university and public school men, and there was power under the rules of the Corps to admit men who did not come within the general qualification, but were considered specially eligible for membership. In the first instance, before it was realised that the war was to involve the whole of the nation's available manhood, the qualification rule was fairly closely adhered to in the selection of candidates, but before long selection came to depend solely on the question whether the candidate appeared to be personally suitable for commissioned rank, and likely to train into an efficient officer.

Under the rules of the Corps, candidates were required to be proposed and seconded by members, and all applications came before a Selection Committee and were decided by ballot. This system was abandoned as impracticable at the very outset, and the responsibility for selection, after the Corps moved to Berkhamsted, was delegated by the C.O. to the officer commanding the depôt, assisted by a committee. For this committee work the Corps was fortunate in obtaining the services of some of its old members and a number of other gentlemen, whose names will be found in Appendix III. To these gentlemen, and the others who worked with them, the Corps is deeply indebted for the care and patience with which they carried out their very laborious and exacting task.

When the system of selection had developed into a routine, the process was as follows:—

Candidates first filled up a form in which a variety of personal particulars were required to be given, and then appeared for an interview before a committee consisting of two or three of the members of the Selection Committee. When recruiting was brisk, it was found necessary at times to have as many as five or six of these committees sitting at the same time. The committee, after conversation with the candidate, formed their opinion as to his suitability and decided there and then whether to accept or reject, and if accepted the candidate was passed on to the O.C. Depôt. Rejection by a committee was treated as final, but acceptance required confirmation by the O.C. Depôt, and if the O.C. Depôt, when the accepted candidate came before him, felt any doubt as to his suitability, he either rejected the candidate or referred the case for further consideration by a larger committee of at least four members, whose decision was final. Occasionally, when there was an extraordinary rush of applicants, as invariably happened at times when conscription was in the air and some fresh development seemed to indicate that its adoption was imminent, it was found necessary to supplement the system described above by a preliminary sifting out of applicants, the obviously unsuitable being rejected at once so as to avoid the delay which would be caused by sending them before a Selection Committee. At one of these times of pressure about 1,200 candidates were dealt with in one single day, with the result that about 100 were finally selected, and of these successful applicants a few had had to pass through the four separate stages of scrutiny mentioned above.

The amount of work accomplished by the Committee of Selection may to some extent be appreciated from the fact that the total number of candidates who came before them must have amounted to some 60,000 or 70,000. The soundness of the committee's judgment is shown by the fact that the number of accepted candidates who were disqualified for commissions owing to misconduct while in training was negligible, and the proportion who failed to obtain commissions owing to want of military aptitude was remarkably small.

THE DEPÔT.

A few words on the principles of selection employed by the committee may be of interest, although perhaps when stated they may seem somewhat obvious. The committees relied mainly on the opinion they formed as to the candidate's personality when he came before them for his interview, and letters of recommendation were looked upon as having a substantial value only in comparatively few cases. A good education was, of course, expected and insisted upon, and sufficient social position to justify the candidate's being trained for a rôle in which he would be called upon to play the part of one in authority from whom both precept and example would be required. Given these conditions, and provided the applicant was within the age limit, the sole question was: "Is the candidate likely to make a good leader?" Proficiency in outdoor sports was looked upon as indicating the possession of the right qualities, and a man who had obtained school or club colours was practically certain of selection. Men who had had colonial experience or had held responsible positions at home or abroad—and many such applied for admission to the Corps—were always favourably considered by the committee, and almost invariably accepted. Every candidate, however, whatever his previous history, was carefully considered, and, if the preliminary conditions as to age and education were satisfied, the committee formed its own judgment as to his character and personality, and if it decided that he was likely to train into an efficient officer, he was accepted.

When compulsory service became the rule, recruiting for the Corps was, of course, carried on under conditions very different from those which had previously obtained, but it would probably be somewhat uninteresting to trace the various stages by which the field of recruiting was gradually narrowed. It will be sufficient to say that eventually the Corps was only able to choose from youths who had not attained sufficient age for service with the colours.

At the outbreak of the war the Inns of Court was the only O.T.C. which formed part of the Territorial Force, and great numbers of men, former members of the Corps and others, flocked to Lincoln's Inn to offer their services. The Corps, however, had only its small peace establishment. The numbers were at once brought up to strength and a waiting list was opened. Men on the waiting list were given such elementary training as was available, and many of them were eventually absorbed into the Corps. The process of absorption was assisted by an increase of the establishment, but in the meantime a large number of those on the list had grown tired of waiting and had enlisted elsewhere, while others had obtained commissions without actually entering the Corps. In these same early days, moreover, other units had been formed with a view to recruiting men of good education and position, and a very great number of men who would have made admirable officers commenced their war service, and in too many cases ended their service, in the ranks. The result was that when the men who joined up in the first enthusiasm for active service had been enlisted in some branch or other of the army, the question how the recruiting for the Corps was to be made to keep pace with its output of officers became a serious one. It was soon recognised that there would be an enormous demand for officers, and at the period now referred to the great call was for officers of infantry and artillery.

Apart from Sandhurst and Woolwich, the only establishments for the training of such officers were the Senior and Junior Officers' Training Corps Contingents at the Universities and Public Schools, the Inns of Court O.T.C., and the Artists' Rifles O.T.C. formed a few months after the commencement of the war out of one of the battalions of the Artists' Corps. The University contingents were almost immediately drained dry, and the school contingents could only turn out a limited number of boys of sufficient age. At the same time there was plenty of the right material in the country, and men anxious to serve and of the proper stamp for commissions were pouring into England from every part of the Dominions. It was found that the real difficulty in the way of recruiting for the Inns of Court was the fact that its very existence, to say nothing of its duties and functions, was practically unknown outside a very limited circle, and the only solution of the difficulty appeared to be to advertise, and to advertise as widely as possible without any regard to considerations of dignity or tradition. It was therefore decided to commence a campaign of advertisement, and Mr. H. K. Ryan, subsequently Captain Ryan, was put in charge of the publicity department. Sentiment had to yield to necessity, and it is practically certain that but for the elaborate system of advertising which was adopted the Corps would have been reduced to a skeleton after the first nine months of the war, and would eventually have reckoned its total number of commissions by hundreds instead of by thousands, to the great detriment of the country. Bills and posters were accordingly printed and displayed at railway stations, hotels, theatres, and other public places, and even on ships, giving particulars of the Corps, and inviting men "desirous of being trained for commissions" to apply at Lincoln's Inn. All the clergy in the country and many in the Colonies were asked to act as representatives of the Corps and to distribute information about the Corps in their parishes. Headmasters of schools were approached and asked to co-operate. Recruiting sergeants were sent to the ports of arrival of passenger liners, and shipping agents at some of the ports of embarkation gave very effective assistance. These measures, particularly the appeal for the assistance of the clergy, were most successful, and a stream of applicants flowed to the depôt.

A further development was then planned, and it was proposed to establish Selection Committees at several centres at a distance from London with a view to dealing with men who were not prepared to spend money and time on what might prove a fruitless journey to London, and to avoid useless expense to applicants, who had no real chance of being selected. There were elements of difficulty about this scheme owing to the possibility of conflict with local interests and activities. A committee was, however, established in Dublin, under the presidency of Mr. Justice Ross, which sent over a large number of young Irishmen. Committees were also set up at Exeter for West of England candidates and at Cardiff for South Wales, both of which proved a success.

This invasion of the provinces led to an important development in connection with the Lancashire Territorial Troops. When the Corps proceeded to make arrangements for recruiting in Liverpool its operations were objected to by the local

THE DEPÔT.

Territorial Force Association as being an encroachment on their recruiting area. The matter was then discussed with Lord Derby, the President of the West Lancs. T.F.A., and an arrangement was speedily arrived at. It was agreed that Lancashire should furnish a supply of recruits for the Corps and that these recruits should be ear-marked for commissions in Lancashire Territorial Battalions after completing their course of training. This arrangement was promptly put into execution and successfully carried on until the full operation of compulsory service rendered it impracticable. A great deal of the success of the Lancashire agreement was due to Major H. R. Parkes, C.B., the Secretary of the West Lancs. T.F.A. Major Parkes arranged for batches of candidates, provisionally approved by himself, to assemble month by month at Liverpool. The O.C. Depôt and another officer of the Corps attended at Liverpool, and, with the assistance of Major Parkes, interviewed the candidates, and decided as to their acceptance or rejection. A further supply of Lancastrians was obtained by transfer from the ranks of one of the Lancashire Brigades then in training at Grantham.

The result of all these activities was a constant and ample flow of recruits to the Corps up to the time of the establishment of the new system of Cadet Battalions, and the reduction in the strength of the Corps.

In December, 1916, Major J. A. Hay, T.D., who had been in command of the depôt from the time when the Corps left London, was succeeded as O.C. Depôt by Captain F. Le Neve Foster, who remained in military charge at Lincoln's Inn until the end of the war.

In the course of Captain Foster's period of duty, the depôt became the office of a Joint Board of Selection for the Artists' Rifles O.T.C. and the Inns of Court. Up to that time these Corps had each carried on their own system of selection and recruiting in friendly rivalry. Compulsory service had, however, completely altered the conditions and opportunities of recruiting, and it was decided by the authorities that one establishment should act as selecting body for both Corps. Some of the members of the old Selection Committee, with the addition of representatives from the Artists, were now officially constituted a Board of Selection for the two Corps, under the presidency of Sir Alfred Goodson. The Board sat at No. 10, Stone Buildings, to interview candidates and decide their fate as before, but for the two Corps and not for the Inns of Court alone. This system remained in force until the end of the war.

As already mentioned, the depôt in the first instance and during a period of about eighteen months had not only to select and enlist the recruits, but had also to see to their being clothed and equipped and to put them through the first stages of recruit training.

When the Corps moved to Berkhamsted, Captain A. G. Mathews was left on the Depôt Staff and was put in charge of the recruit training. Captain Mathews remained at that duty till he was relieved by Captain E. à C. Bergne in the early part of 1916. In the spring of 1915, Mr. Spencer Brett was commissioned in the Corps and added to the training staff of the depôt. To assist these officers a number of N.C.O.'s were supplied from Headquarters at Berkhamsted. The training consisted of the usual recruit course of elementary drill and musketry and physical exercises, with the addition of some instruction in such subjects as elementary tactics and map-reading and occasional lectures.

During the greater part of the year 1915, recruits were sent down in drafts to Berkhamsted as accommodation became available there, and the demand at Berkhamsted, speaking generally, kept pace with the supply at Lincoln's Inn. At the end of 1915, however, an epidemic of measles broke out among the troops at Berkhamsted and no further drafts could be sent there until the Corps was out of quarantine, a matter of some months. In the meantime, recruiting was proceeding at Lincoln's Inn without intermission, and the numbers on the strength at the depôt were daily increasing till at one time they reached almost 2,000. To give adequate training to such numbers with the few instructors available was almost an impossibility, and the energies of Captain Mathews and his staff were very severely taxed. The Gardens of the Inns did not afford sufficient space, and at this time of congestion a large part of the work was done on Hampstead Heath. A disused dancing hall, in the Vale of Health, was rented to provide cover in bad weather, and the Y.M.C.A. gave the Corps very valuable assistance by establishing a marquee on the Heath at which the men could obtain meals and could rest during intervals of drill.

Early in 1916, when the Corps was again free to receive drafts, the congestion at the depôt was relieved and the accumulation gradually absorbed. In June, 1916, orders were received that recruits were to be sent down to Corps Headquarters immediately after enlistment, and training at the depôt came to an end.

In connection with the training it should be mentioned that before the Lewis gun had been introduced into the Army as one of its regular weapons, Captain Brett found an opportunity of learning the gun, and held a series of spare-time classes for instruction in its mechanism and use.

Reference has been made above to the congestion at the depôt in the winter of 1915-16, when men were kept in London for months owing to sickness at Berkhamsted. The men at the depôt received pay and subsistence allowance, but had to find their own board and lodging. One result of this congestion was that a number of men who had not expected to be in London for more than a few weeks found themselves, as weeks grew into months, without any means beyond their pay and allowances and unable to pay their way. To cope with this difficulty the Mess in the Temple was furnished with barrack furniture and made available for housing about thirty men. Arrangements were also made with one of the restaurants in the neighbourhood to supply meals at special prices, and in that way satisfactory provision was made for men who were obliged to live on their military income.

Another branch of the work at the depôt remains to be mentioned. After the absorption of the original waiting list there still remained a number of men who for one reason or another could not become members of the Corps, but were desirous of obtaining some elementary military training, and others from time to time joined the party. The training of these men was originally superintended by Captain P. F. Warner, and later on by Major F. R. Gregson, a retired officer of the regular army, and an N.C.O. of the Corps was detailed to act as assistant instructor. This "unattested contingent," as it was called, was further made use of for giving elementary military training to civilians selected for commissions in the Tunnelling Companies R.E., and eventually this became the sole reason for the existence of the unattested contingent. When mining and countermining began to play a large part in the operations at the front, there was a great call, and, for a long time, a constant call for officers with experience in mining and other underground work. No military training or experience was required of them, but it was thought desirable that civilians selected for these commissions should have some little knowledge of military matters before being actually commissioned, and the work of the unattested contingent appeared to meet the requirements of the case. Candidates selected for commissions in the Tunnelling Companies were accordingly sent to Lincoln's Inn for periods of about six weeks, and were there instructed in elementary drill and in such subjects as military law and military etiquette, and given frequent opportunities of drilling and "taking charge" of others. Some hundreds of tunnelling officers received their first military training as members of the unattested contingent. The Flying Corps made use of the unattested contingent for a similar purpose at a time when a number of men were being commissioned without previous military training for service as officers in the Kite Balloon Section.

The depôt had its full share of damage from enemy bombs in the course of the air raids. In October, 1915, bombs were dropped in Lincoln's Inn and in Chancery Lane, just outside Stone Buildings. The bombs which fell in the Inn did a great deal of destruction, notably to the stained glass of the Chapel windows, but did not reach Corps Headquarters. The bomb, however, which fell in the Lane wrecked the interior of No. 10. The main fabric is exceedingly strong and was only superficially damaged, but practically all the windows and window frames on the Chancery Lane side were demolished, parts of the ceilings were brought down, and the interior partitions were broken. Fortunately no one was injured, although there was a small guard on the premises. The next occasion when the enemy got uncomfortably near the depôt was in December, 1917. This time a bomb landed almost immediately in front of the entrance to No. 10. There was again a large amount of superficial damage to the stonework caused by the road metal being hurled in all directions, and again the windows were wrecked, the front door and doorposts were blown in and other damage done to the interior. The men on duty this time also escaped without any casualty.

The depôt was very fortunate in its non-commissioned officers. At the time when recruits were clothed and equipped and commenced their training at Lincoln's Inn, R.Q.M.S. Langridge carried out the whole of the Quartermaster duties, and Staff-Sergeant Vassila (subsequently R.S.M. Vassila) acted as Depôt Sergeant-Major. Later, when only office work was carried on, Staff-Sergeant R. G. Wallis, and subsequently Sergeant C. M. Pembo, acted as Depôt Sergeant-Major. The non-commissioned officers detailed from Berkhamsted to act as assistant instructors to the recruits did extremely good work under circumstances which at times were very difficult and trying.

Chapter X.

THE SQUADRON.

LINCOLN'S INN.

None of those who played a part in the early war days in London, whatever may have been their subsequent experiences in France, Egypt, Palestine, or elsewhere, will easily forget the indescribable hurry and bustle of the life at the "Devil's Own" Headquarters. Old friends were leaving every day to take up commissions, recruits were pouring in, and many "back numbers" appeared again, eager to play their part in the Great Adventure.

Each morning the Corps paraded on the grass (real grass in those early days), North of Lincoln's Inn Hall, under the eagle eye of R.S.M. Burns, whose daily passages of arms over the unfailing regularity of the whole Corps to play the rôle of "right maaarrtters" will go down to history.

After inspection by Colonel Errington, the Squadron marched off to the Temple Gardens, where they disported themselves in various ways in the somewhat confined space, the routine of troop drill and rifle exercises (we had no swords in those days) being pleasantly varied by lectures on the "noble animal" by J. C. Porter, musketry by Leveson Gower, map-reading by Field, and other kindred subjects, usually held in the open air, on a grassy bank from which could be surreptitiously watched, from the corner of an eye, the antics of the recruits' class (or "waiting-list"), who were being licked into some sort of shape by poor Cotton. All the time, rumours of Camp were bandied about, day after day and week after week, but nothing seemed to come of it. Latterly, the routine was varied by frequent visits to more open country in the shape of Wimbledon Common (Oh! those dismounted attacks under a sweltering August sun!), Richmond Park, and Worcester Park. Occasionally (all too seldom) flashes were given us of the glory to be in the shape of horses—real horses—on which we cut our cavalry teeth (painful process) in a riding school on Wimbledon Common with Waggett (then Farrier-Sergeant) as Master of the Ring, and we also had occasional mounted troop training on the Worcester Park Polo Ground.

During these first weeks the Squadron Commander, Duke Moore, had been away on a staff job, and Wood Hill was running the show, backed up by Field, Leveson Gower, and Robinson, and—for a few days—Cotton. Moore returned for a short time before we left town, and then went, with Robinson, to the E. Riding Yeomanry. J. T. Morris was Squadron Sergeant-Major, and got through a mass of work, as did Yeatman, who was S.Q.M.S. These two saw us safely settled in the country, and then handed over to Witt and Herbert Porter respectively—stalwarts of earlier days. As September wore on, rumours of Camp grew in intensity, and finally the news was officially published that the Corps would proceed to Berkhamsted on September 28th.

BERKHAMSTED.

The day came round and the Corps duly "proceeded" in an atmosphere of suppressed excitement, to the friendly Hertfordshire town, which was to be our home for so long. On detraining, the Infantry made their way into Camp in the field adjoining the Station, and the Squadron, with sturdy independence, headed in the reverse direction and were soon halted in Water Lane, outside a massive pair of gates which screened the entrance yard of the Old Brewery—of blessed and glorious memory. We finally sorted ourselves and inspected our new quarters. They seemed bare enough at first—it was a derelict rabbit-warren of a place—and there was no hint of the comfort and secure isolation of later days, with the home-like "Cosy Corner," "Crow's Nest" and "Parade View." The quarters for "other ranks" consisted of two long lofts (soon christened "A" and "B" Dormitories) over what were to be stables. The officers were, after a few nights, billeted in the town, and the Sergeants were in what was afterwards known as the Old Guard Room. They migrated later to what subsequently became the Armoury, a dark cell-like chamber, entered from the "Covered Yard" (what memories these old names bring back!) from which was also approached the Squadron Office, erstwhile a kitchen. In the Covered Yard stood the wooden hut which became the Pharmacy. Poor old Jim Kerr fathered the Sergeants and saw they were properly turned out. His death in Aylesbury Hospital in 1918 was a real loss to the Squadron. We left him to Berkhamsted when we departed in 1916, and it is said that the change from Squadron to Infantry proved too much for him, and finally broke his honest old heart.

The almost complete lack of horses rather denuded the Squadron gingerbread of its accustomed gilt, but we lived largely on hope in those days and we were not entirely horseless, for had we not Rowena with us? For a fortnight, having no "stables," we were afflicted with a cruel form of sport, viz.: "physical jerks," with the Battalion in the cold grey dawn. How we ground and gnashed our teeth and stifled our Cavalier oaths as we padded round dewy fields or bent our weary frames into unaccustomed angles. In vain, Sister Anne-like, we looked for our horses, who would redeem us from this matutinal torture. And then, at last, the great day came—October 14th, 1914—when we filed to the Station, armed with the necessary gear, to await the longed-for "hairies." Finally the trucks sailed slowly in and discipline gave way in heartfelt cheers. Little did those old "plugs," as they were pulled and pushed and heaved from their trucks, realise that some of them were beginning an acquaintance with the Squadron that was to last till the beginning of 1919. With the arrival of the horses, who were followed quickly by others, we began to live; before, we had merely existed. Our empty spaces in the Brewery were transformed into stables, and before long were filled to overflowing, so that "D" Troop spread out across Water Lane into another building, and "C" Troop had a fresh enclosure made for some of their horses out by the forage store. The men, too, overflowed into the town, and were billeted out at the International Stores and the Progress Hall, over the Co-operative Society.

The life of the Squadron at Berkhamsted is too well remembered by all who lived it to need recapitulation. It will suffice to recall a few incidents and personalities, equine and human. We soon got into our stride and training, and as fast as commissions drained our strength, gaps were filled up. All would-be recruits were "vetted" by a Squadron officer at the dépôt in Stone Buildings twice a week, and a party of recruits was formed up in town, who were licked into shape till there were vacancies for a draft at Berkhamsted. The first winter we were dogged by ill-luck in the matter of horse-sickness, nearly every horse falling a victim to pink-eye (brought in by remounts) and ringworm, with an occasional case of strangles or pneumonia thrown in. Training was practically at a standstill, and the Squadron was divided up into parties for temperature-taking, slow exercise, special feeding, and so on. By degrees we began to get up to date—swords, universal saddlery, issue boots, and so on—the whole panoply of war. As regards messing, during the first winter we waded and slithered to our marquee in Camp through a sea of mud and slush, and later we shared a shed in Key's Timber Yard with some of the Infantry, and basked in the sunshine of Mr. and Mrs. Daborn's smiles—always two of the Squadron's staunchest friends. Wood Hill left us in September, 1915, and Field took over the Command, which he kept till the end, steering us with his proverbial tact and bonhomie through the deeps and shallows of our varied career. Many generations now of Squadron men know what they owe to Field in the matter of their early military careers. 'Arry 'Awke is just the old Squadron tradition incarnate.

As training progressed and we had a long day in the field every week, we began to find out the great charm of the country around Berkhamsted, and were fortunate to get fairly regular hunting with the Old Berkeley and the Hertfordshire packs. A Corporal's stripe was the open sesame to the hunting field—a great incentive. Our drill grounds were limited in number and in size. We tried Ashridge Park, the Common, Haresfoot Park, and (perhaps best of all) a large field adjoining the Chesham Road between Haresfoot and Kingshill. But for field-work the country was admirable, and all who were in the Squadron in those days look back with pleasure to the Thursday schemes—"Whiteland v. Brownland" and so on—and such points on the map as the R of R. GADE, the Pip of POTTEN END, and K of KINGSHILL, and the first M of MARCHMONT HOUSE became burnt into our brain. We blew up every available railway bridge within miles, we burned forage stores at Whipsnade and Markyate, we waylaid valuable convoys on the Watford—Tring Road with resulting horrible massacre, our patrols knew every nook and cranny within a large radius, and we charged with reckless bravery against thickly-manned imaginary trenches on the down-land of the Ivinghoe hills. Other days, too, we had in company with the Infantry, and Public School Field Days on a large scale, when the country side was thickly covered with tireless, racing schoolboys, who stoutly refused to be taken prisoners.

Few feelings are so satisfactory as those of the healthily tired cavalryman after a long day in the field. His saddlery is cleaned, his horse is bedded down, watered, fed and made comfortable for the night, and he goes off for his evening meal (to which he does full justice); he has his last pipe, and rolls himself with contented grunts in his blankets, to fall asleep at once, feeling that after all this is the life of lives, and with a heartfelt pity for those who have to spend their days apart from a horse, and the things that appertain thereto. Though the cavalryman's life consists chiefly of toil, the time comes (except for those whose fate is to be on night stable guard) when he can lay aside wisp and feed-tin and turn to other forms of pleasure. The Squadron sing-songs at the "Crown" became a feature of the life, and elsewhere in the town who shall say how many hearts were set a-flutter by clink of spur and jaunty set of cap. There was a trumpeter but no; we will leave romance discreetly veiled.

When one lives with horses day and night, one gets to know something about them and their doings, and those old plugs were good friends to us, whatever we may have thought when the S.S.M. "put us through the hoop" with that deadly thong of his round the Brewery field, what time we appeared from the dépôt for the riding test. Ye Gods! was there ever such a crowded five minutes as that! The hairies quickly acquired names—most of them simply asked for names. There was the famous quartette which should have been left at the plough, or sent to pull "heavies" out of the Flanders mud—Gossamer (alias the Dachshund), Stockings, the Elephant, and Marie Lloyd. Then there was Satan, highly strung and apparently savage, who with gentle humouring became a veritable equine lamb—only breaking out a few days before the Squadron left Berkhamsted in 1916, when in a fit of diabolical humour, he deposited on terra firma an Infantry officer who was proudly caracoling (all against his will) at the head of his admiring Company. And yet there are those who say a horse has no sense of humour! The Dun was another old and hardened sinner, a big golden mulish creature, who resented any handling of his hind legs. Dinky, the little chestnut in "D" Troop, and Mary ("the Hackney") were with us to the end, as also were the two Peggies, Juliet (who broke the heart of a certain S.Q.M.S.), Delilah, Pinky, Roy, Sonny, Pavlova, Jimcock (whose ugly shape was only equalled by his speed), Baby, Reynolds, Bill, Sambo, Jellicoe, and a few others, who never missed through all the years of war their annual Christmas feast of carrots. Then there was the fat little grey aristocrat Thomas, who carried O.C. Squadron (alias Mounted Detachment) through the last years of the war. Others of earlier days we shall not forget are Punch, Black Maria, Margaret, Tealeaves, Bunty, and Tipperary, so called for his sixteen hands; not to mention Susan, and the Knut, lady and gentleman volunteers. We had horses of all shapes, sizes, colours, and denominations thrown at us, and we licked them into shape, taught them to behave, taught them to jump, taught them their drill, taught them the gentle art of patrolling, taught them in fact all or most of the accomplishments that should be in the repertoire of a pukka troop-horse. What a change it must have been to their peace-time avocations. Some have doubtless now returned to these, but with what an added richness of experience and with what (we hope) happy memories of regular and plentiful feeds and personal attention. Now that we too are "Civvies" again, we take off our hats to you, you most lovable "hairies," and when we meet you in your milk-cart or your brewer's dray (some of you!) we will stop and have a yarn about those good old far-off days.

We made a host of friends in and around Berkhamsted, and many familiar characters will be remembered—among them Mr. Newman, the ubiquitous and indefatigable photographer; Mr. Bunker, of Northchurch Farm, who helped us in many ways; Mr. Rawle, who ran the Staghounds; Mr. Wingfield, the saddler; Mr. Gubbins, the friendly proprietor of the "Crown," where we had our Squadron Room for lectures and sing-songs; Mr. Blincowe, the helpful Stationmaster; and Mr. Pike, our landlord at the Old Brewery. The hospitality of the inhabitants generally is too well remembered to need any word here. We only hope that they will have as kindly memories of the Squadron as the Squadron has of them.

As the war went on it began to appear that in all probability there would not be a heavy demand for Cavalry and Yeomanry Officer reinforcements, and large numbers of men from the Squadron, who could rub up enough trigonometry to satisfy O.C. Squadron (and, later, "brass hats" from the W.O.), elected the Gunners as a suitable field for the display of their horsemanship. At the beginning of 1916, the Cadet Schools were formed all over the country, and these embryo gunners went off to Exeter and St. John's Wood. For some time it was supposed that we should become a Cavalry Cadet Squadron, but eventually Netheravon and Kildare were selected as the only two, and to these in later times all our men were despatched, and we formed one of their sources of supply. After the Cavalry slump came a time when Cavalry officers were suddenly needed, and we could not turn them out fast enough. After that again another slump, when the fate of the Squadron hung in the balance, the upshot being that the "wash out" was never sounded, but in the autumn of 1916 the establishment was reduced to three officers, fifty men in training for Commissions, and a staff, and it was decreed that we should be attached for training purposes to one of the Reserve Cavalry Regiments. As our time at Berkhamsted began to draw to a close, and our establishment was in process of reduction, we were not sent any more recruits from the dépôt at Stone Buildings, so we had to fill up gaps with would-be gunners from the Infantry, some of whom were overheard to remark that they could do with a bit of a holiday in the Old Brewery. These, we venture to think, lived to regret their outspokenness, and several remembered pressing engagements elsewhere. But many were eventually transferred to the Mounted Detachment (as the Squadron became) and were of our best. Another thing that kept us alive in those days was a decree by the then C.O. (Lieut.-Colonel Sinclair Thomson) that all the Infantry officers should pass through a course of Riding School. We had at that time two Sergeants attached to us for instructional duties from the Vth. Dragoon Guards—Jenkins and Aldridge by name. To their tender mercies the Infantry officers—regardless of rank, height, or weight—were turned over twice a week, and right manfully they went through the ordeal—crossed stirrups and all. Their reward came when, after a long and strenuous course, the day arrived when they lined up mounted in Mill Street for the first of a series of cross-country paper chases. These proved a distinct feature of our last days at Berkhamsted and added a zest to life.

At length the time came for us to leave, and accordingly, on December 6th, 1916, led by the Corps band, we marched away from the Old Brewery, which had been our home for more than two years, and entrained for Maresfield Park, in Sussex. The horses had been sent on by rail with Sergeant Aldridge and a small party. The whole Battalion was at the Station, and many of our good friends the inhabitants of Berkhamsted, not a few of whom (among the young and fair) were observed to dash a tell-tale tear from downcast eye. The Band played selections ("Nancy Dawson" and others) on the platform to keep up our spirits, finishing up with "Auld Lang Syne" as the train steamed away. We felt that we were leaving much behind us in Berkhamsted that we had come to look upon as almost inseparable from our Army life, but the thought that we were going to be attached to the Cavalry gave us a new interest to look forward to. We tramped with brave heart from Euston to London Bridge, and eventually arrived at Uckfield Station, whence we tramped the two miles or so in pitchy darkness to our destination, Maresfield Park.

MARESFIELD PARK.

Here to start with we had a struggle to keep our end up as we were "nobody's child," and we felt the need of a regular S.Q.M.S. and so on to fend for us in the matter of the necessities of life. However, the Colonel and Adjutant of the 13th Reserve Regiment of Cavalry were goodness itself, and we soon found our feet and felt that this was the real thing and that here at last we were in our element. Everyone talked "horse," and the music of many trumpets was pleasant to our ears. Training was seriously interfered with by the long spell of frost, which made anything but Riding School at slow paces almost impossible, there being no covered-in School. However, we had the best of the Instructors at our disposal, of whom we shall not forget S.S.M.I.M. Channer on the Square, S.S.M.R.R. Darby in Riding School (both of the XX. Hussars), and Sergeant Murray (XIV. Hussars) for Musketry. Our staff was temporarily reduced to two officers, Merriman and Fisher, and everyone's time was filled up. We were still fed with drafts from Berkhamsted as we needed them, and things were going with a swing, when the re-shuffling of all the Reserve Cavalry Regiments was announced, and we were told that we were to proceed with the 13th R.R.C. to Tidworth, where the then 11th and 13th Reserve Regiments were to be amalgamated into the new 5th R.R.C. Accordingly at midnight, on February 9th—10th, 1917, we marched to Buxted, leading the horses saddled up, and there entrained with the Regiment. After a long and tortuous night journey we arrived in the early morning of February 10th, at Tidworth, which was to prove our home for the next two years.

TIDWORTH.

Detraining at about 9 a.m., we led the horses along the ice-covered road to Aliwal Barracks, where we were met by a Subaltern of the XVIII. Hussars (an old Squadron man), who had been detailed to look after us. After putting the horses into some temporary tin stables at the far end of the barracks, we made them comfortable and then began to turn round and settle in. This was an uncomfortable and laborious process, as the whole place was in a state of flux, a Reserve Regiment of Lancers having vacated our Barracks only the day before, and now two Hussar Reserve Regiments and a whole galaxy of Yeomanry Regiments were being telescoped into one huge Reserve Regiment, and we were somewhere in the middle of the telescope. However, by lying doggo, we more than survived, and things eventually straightened out to our entire satisfaction. We were allotted quarters adjoining "D" Squadron, in Assaye Barrack, which we occupied till the end in 1919. Major Stewart, of the XVIII. Hussars, commanded this Squadron, and as he had bumped into Field in a previous existence, he knew all about us, and proved a good friend to us all along. The horses (they must have thought they were never coming to anchor) were moved in a day or two to other temporary stables near our quarters, and we were allotted two houses in the Married Quarters for our Squadron Office and Storerooms. Here also slept the cook, storeman, and grooms. We were also given a S.Q.M.S. from the Regiment, A. H. Whittingham, of the XXth., and ultimately became a separate accounting unit, which saved a mass of correspondence with Berkhamsted. Later we had as S.Q.M.S., the evergreen veteran of South Africa and Mons, A. O'Connell, of the Xth., who was with us to the end.

At first the weather prevented anything but slow exercise on the roads, but with the advent of Spring, we began to live again and to realise the many advantages of Salisbury Plain as a training ground for Cavalry. Sergeant C. Wash, of the XXth., proved an A1 instructor in equitation. Drafts began to dribble away to the two Cavalry Cadet Squadrons, Netheravon and Kildare. The former, with its genial Commandant, Major Bruce, we soon got to know well, as it was only a few miles away across the Plain. When Sergt. Wash departed to Mesopotamia, Sergeant-Major Darby returned, and remained with us to the end. As time went on many old Squadron men came into the Mess, both hardened veterans from France and elsewhere, and newly-joined subalterns from the Cadet Squadrons, resplendent in the last word in breeches and field boots. We soon found that life at Tidworth was far from undesirable, and when fate, or a too insecure seat in the Riding School, decreed that "owing to the exigencies of the service," dismounted training was more suitable, the unhappy victim, having once tasted the joys of the cavalry life, returned, we fear, with but an ill grace to the foot-slogging treadmill at Berkhamsted. As we were part of a Composite Regiment, which formed a Brigade with the 5th and 6th Reserve Regiments in cases of emergency, we had opportunities of regimental and brigade drill and field work on a comparatively large scale, in addition to the mild excitement of sudden mobilization, brought on by rumours of the German Fleet's appearance in the North Sea, or a bit of extra trouble in "the distressful country." We also took part in inspections by Lord French and Sir William Robertson on Bulford Field. All the time men were leaving with more or less regularity for Netheravon and Kildare, their departure being enlivened by farewell dinners which would have shocked the Food Controller had he been within range, and made his "each particular hair to stand on end." The old Squadron song was revived and brought up to date, and there was plenty of musical talent. Small though our numbers were in these latter days, we ran both a rugger and a soccer team, the former especially distinguishing themselves by defeating, in the Autumn of 1918, the Netheravon Cadet Squadron and the I.C.O.T.C. Infantry at Berkhamsted. We were also freely used for "window-dressing" when inspecting Generals appeared—not always an unmixed blessing. But they were good days, those Tidworth days—just as the earlier ones at Berkhamsted had been. The country grew very familiar to us, and here again we made many friends, though it was among our fellow-men, the fair sex being few and far between. The Regiment were always good to us, from Colonel Pollok-Morris downwards. Captain Storey, of the XX. Hussars, was Musketry Officer, and we had Corporal Mather, of the XVIIIth., as our own instructor. Lieutenants Kyte and Lethbridge-Abell were in charge of Bombing and Anti-Gas Instruction respectively, and there was a danger of our becoming specialists first and cavalrymen afterwards. The Squadron (or Mounted Detachment as we then were) retrieved their evil pre-war reputation for indifferent marksmanship, and at the last shoot, before demobilisation, obtained what they were told was the highest average in the annals of the local ranges at Bulford.

We had remarkably few casualties among the horses, and those few were usually returned as perfect cures after a few days in the Station Veterinary Hospital, which was in charge of Captain Barry, a big-hearted Irishman with all his countrymen's love and knowledge of a horse. A familiar figure to the last generation at Tidworth was "Bertie," the long-bodied mongrel, who, springing (as is the manner of Camp dogs) from nowhere in particular, attached himself inseparably to us as mascot, "doing his bit" as stable sentry, on all parades (including fire-drill), mounted drills, and field days, when he chased rabbits and field-officers with delightful impartiality. Where is he now, we wonder?

THE SQUADRON.

The German Offensive in March, 1918, came with a crash, and a crop of fresh rumours was freely circulated, the most popular one being that we were to go out to France as an independent Troop (!) to help stem the tide of onrushing Boche. But it was not to be; the tide turned without our assistance, and we were left high and dry, and so continued until the day of Armistice and after. The end came on January 25th, 1919, when the last of our men had been demobilized or sent, in the case of those from overseas, to a repatriation Camp, via Berkhamsted. Field was the last to leave the sinking ship. The end had really come a few days before, when the old horses, some of whom had been with us since that momentous day in October, 1914, were ridden and led to Marlborough to be put under the hammer. It was an inglorious end, and we only wished that we had a "Squadron Home of Rest for Tired Heroes," where the hairies could have ended their days in well-earned ease. But it was not to be, and they are scattered to the four winds; but they will surely know, with their unfailing intuition, that in the annals of the Old Squadron their name will live for ever.

It is difficult to write of those old Squadron men whom we shall not meet again—and there are all too many. Not a few of their names had become almost household words with us, and we shall always remember their cheery companionship. Good fellows all, they will not be forgotten as the years go on, and we shall often think of them in their different generations—in old pre-war days, in Temple Gardens, in the old Brewery at Berkhamsted, at Maresfield Park, and Tidworth Barracks. During the war, over 1,100 men passed through the Squadron, and of these the proportion of casualties was high, considering the few opportunities the cavalry really had of getting going in the main theatre of war.

At the time of writing (January, 1921) the Corps is being reconstituted on pre-war lines, and the Mounted Detachment, which assumed the chrysalis stage at Tidworth in January, 1919, is now, after two years in a dormant state, bursting forth into the full glories of a Squadron again, under the Command of H. D. P. Francis, a veteran of pre-war days, who brings with him the experiences of the Palestine Campaign (the cavalry show of the war), and under whose leadership the old Squadron traditions will be carefully nurtured.

And through the future the memories of the years of war will remain, and all we old sons of the Squadron will often live those days over again, sounding the "Fall In" on the trumpet of memory to summon before us old places and faces (of men and horses) and telling them off, "from the right by sections," on the parade ground of our imagination.

Chapter XI.

THE COMPANY.

Company training at Berkhamsted was conducted in accordance with the principles laid down in the official manuals, and in the spirit infused into the Corps by its Commanding Officer. The object, always kept steadily in view, was to train men to be officers; and this differentiated the training, not merely in the details of the curriculum, but still more in spirit, from the training of an ordinary battalion. The quality ultimately aimed at was leadership, to be built up on a solid foundation of drill and discipline, with a superstructure of knowledge and practice in command, and with full emphasis on the moral qualities needed in those who have to lead men in the field. The maxim of Napoleon (the truth of which has been so irrefutably established during the war), that the moral is to the material as three to one, lies at the basis of Company training as much as of the major operations of war.

The local conditions of Company training at Berkhamsted were ideal. For drill we had the huge field, measuring about 700 yards by 400, which once had been the playground of Berkhamsted School. What its original local name may have been I do not know; but when we arrived there it was being utilised by the first drafts of "Kitchener's Army," and it was promptly christened "Kitchener's Field," and "Kitchener's Field" it will remain in the memory of all war members of the Inns of Court. In this space the Companies could drill, and the Battalion adopt the most extended order, even when the strength ran into four figures. The neighbouring Castle Grounds, once the abode of the Black Prince, became eventually a convenient and sheltered School of Musketry. For field work, the surrounding country provided a most admirable variety of terrain. Berkhamsted Common, stretching for some four miles from Potten End to Norcott Hill, furnished an infinite variety of broken ground, covered with bracken, gorse and heather, to say nothing of space for the practice of field entrenchments. Then there was Ashridge Park, with its long stretches of grass or bracken, and its woods, on the use of which no restrictions were placed by Lord Brownlow. Haresfoot Park was a convenient training ground for night operations, and offered surprising facilities for losing a company on a dark night. Other stretches of open ground were within reach, such as Hawridge, Cholesbury, Aldbury, Ivinghoe, and Hudnall Commons, and, further afield, the down country from Pitstone Hill by Steps Hill to the front of the Chilterns at Ivinghoe Beacon. In addition, especially before much of the grass land was broken up for corn, there was a great variety of enclosed country which was available for part of the year, and the undulating contours of the land gave admirable opportunities both for practice in map-reading and for tactical exercises of every kind. A better district for training troops could not be asked for.

For the first two years of the war, Company officers were given a very free hand in the training of their Companies, the results being tested by frequent Battalion drills and Battalion tactical exercises, both by day and by night. It is not possible, therefore, to give exact programmes of training, since each Company Commander had his own methods and distributed his time in his own way. The ingredients of the composition were, however, the same, though the proportions might vary. The staple subjects were drill (close order and extended order), musketry (theory and practice), field entrenchment, map reading, marching, field work, and night operations. Bombing and gas training were added when the war revealed the necessity for them. Physical training was for the first two years mainly represented by plenty of field work; later, together with bayonet fighting, it became a highly developed and much practised item of regular exercise, further promoted by the encouragement of boxing and cross-country running as recreations. Something may be said on each of the items of training.

(1) DRILL.—That drill is the basis of all military training is a proposition universally accepted, and even in the times of greatest pressure, in the early days of the war, this was recognised as the one fundamental and inevitable necessity. Every man entering the Corps did so as a private, and learnt his recruit, squad and company drill as such. The difficulty in the early days lay in the lack of trained instructors. The mechanical details of drill are best taught by experienced N.C.O.'s, and few were available. The difficulty was met, on the one hand by sending officers and N.C.O.'s for courses of instruction at Chelsea whenever possible, and on the other by the keenness of both instructors and instructed to learn all that could be learnt by study of the training manuals and by assiduous practice; the whole being under the eye of a Regular adjutant.

Of the details of the training of the men as privates there is nothing to say. The essence of the matter is that it should be the same in all cases, and salvation is only to be found in strict adherence to the letter of the manual, and ignoring the latest fads brought back from schools of instruction, unless they are in conformity with the letter of the law. What differentiated the training of the Corps from that of an ordinary infantry battalion appeared at a later stage in the training, when men began to learn to drill others. This was an essential and very vital feature. The object of the Corps was not to produce a well-drilled battalion of privates, but to train officers, and to be drilled in the ranks was only essential because, and so far as, it is the sine qua non of learning to drill others. The work of a Company Commander was not complete when (or if) his Company could drill creditably, but only when (or if) each individual could, on leaving it, make a fair show in drilling at least a platoon or section. Consequently the handling of sections and platoons, and even companies, was not confined to N.C.O.'s, but was entrusted to every man in turn; and though it was impossible to give every man as much practice as was desirable, the training of every man in command was a recognised part of the programme. On wet days it could be usefully supplemented by match drill, and many men voluntarily practised this in their billets or undertook rope drill in their not very frequent hours of leisure.

This training in drill was an important stage in the education of an officer, because it was his first exercise in command. Everyone must feel nervous when first called out to take command of a squad of live men, who, having once been set in motion, will continue to move in the given direction until something is done to stop or divert them; and most of us have experienced an awful sinking of the heart at seeing the group temporarily entrusted to us moving to inevitable catastrophe for want of the command which our mind fails to produce or our lips to form. To some men, who had already held responsibility elsewhere, command came easily; to others, less fortunate in their previous circumstances, it was a plant of slow growth; but to none was this practice unnecessary. Many a man, after leaving Berkhamsted, wrote to say what a satisfaction and source of confidence it had been to him when, on joining a battalion with a commission, he found himself able to acquit himself creditably in charge of a platoon under his new commanding officer.

Of course, if a company or a platoon is used as a chopping block on which beginners try their prentice hand, the drill of the ranks will suffer, and casual visitors will find something to complain of. It is not fair to judge of the drill of a company by its exhibition when under an inexperienced private or lance-corporal; but no one with an intelligent comprehension of the object of an O.T.C. would make the mistake. The corrective of drill under the company officers must be applied frequently; and if the highest polish of drill is not arrived at, the deficiency is more than compensated by the training in command which the men as individuals have received. And the performances of the Corps on ceremonial occasions from time to time proved that in order to produce precision of drill it is not necessary (at any rate when dealing with educated men) to think of nothing else in their training.

(2) MUSKETRY.—The importance of musketry was fully realised at Berkhamsted, but its practice was attended by considerable difficulties. The only range in the neighbourhood was a very small one on the edge of the Common, and that was not available in the earlier part of the war. Rifles out of which anyone could fire with safety were scarce, and ammunition was scarcer still. Indeed, so scanty was the supply of ammunition for the first year or two that it was useless to try to make the range serviceable. The most that could be done was to send the "Instruction Class" once in each course to the Corps' old range at Stanmore, and so to give each man a chance of firing a few rounds in the course of his training.

In the early days, therefore, musketry training was confined to what could be done without firing, and this was carried out very assiduously. The care of arms, the handling of arms, the mechanism of the rifle, the theory of musketry, visual training, judging distance, and fire discipline and control were frequent items in the weekly programme; and it may be claimed that every man obtained a really substantial grounding, and not merely acquired this knowledge for himself but, to some extent, learnt to impart it. The first advance on this programme was made when a miniature range was established: at first, in February, 1915, out of doors, and more effectively when a building containing two covered ranges was erected in July, 1916. From this time forward every man had a fair training in the use of the full-sized rifle with reduced bore; and even when the cult of the bomb was at its height, the prime importance of musketry was never lost sight of.

In the course of 1916, the Castle Grounds were converted into a school of musketry, under a special officer. Lewis guns were obtained early in 1916, and a very thorough course of instruction in mechanism and handling was established. Keen interest was taken in this new development, and the results were very good. Towards the end of 1917, conditions with regard to the supply of ammunition being easier, the range on the Common was put in order, and each Company fired a course of it. A small field-firing range was established in a fold of the Chilterns in 1918, which gave some variety to the instruction; but the distance was too great and the conditions too restricted to enable the Corps to obtain the full advantage of field-firing exercises.

In the earlier part of the war, the musketry training was entirely in the hands of the Company officers; but eventually a small musketry staff was established, which was of great assistance in standardising the course of instruction and in introducing the latest methods from Hythe.

(3) FIELD ENTRENCHMENT.—For this branch of a soldier's training the conditions at Berkhamsted fell short of the ideal. The soil consisted of clay, plentifully besprinkled with flints. Digging was in consequence very strenuous work, and progress slow; and if trenches were left uncared-for for any length of time in the winter, they rapidly deteriorated through the action of frost. Also in wet weather (of which we had an ample share) the trenches quickly filled with water and emptied slowly, the percolation being very bad. Revetting materials were scarce—as indeed they were in France; and the amount of time which could be devoted to this branch of training did not admit of instruction in the more advanced developments of the art, such as elaborate dug-outs, listening posts, machine-gun emplacements, and wiring, except in a very sketchy way.

The men did, however, learn to dig. In quite early days a line of entrenchments was planned on the Common above Northchurch, from the neighbourhood of Hill Farm to that of Norcott Hill, facing north; and a portion of the line was allotted to each Company. A line, not continuous, but covering the whole front, was sketched out; and thereafter each Company was left to develop its portion according to its own taste. One Company, blessed with a subaltern who had engineering tastes and knowledge, achieved a dug-out and organised a crater (of which local pits provided a plentiful supply). Another worked steadily for the whole four years at a complete trench-system, with fire-bays, supervision trench, communication trenches, and support line, much too extensive ever to be all in order at the same moment, but enabling recruits to form some idea of the theory of a trench system.

In general, it may be held that, even when trench warfare plays such an important part as it did in 1915, it is waste of time to attempt to teach more than the rudiments at home. Trench life and trench routine cannot be taught under ordinary training conditions, and a week in France or up the Salient taught more than months of playing at it at home could do. What can be taught comprises the principles of trench design and trench siting, the organisation of digging parties, the allotment of tasks, the correct methods of handling pick and shovel, and elementary methods of revetting, drainage, and the like. Further, it is good for every man to have some experience of what a heavy job of digging feels like, and the carrying of tools on the march.

As time went on, some companies deserted their original sites and tried their fortunes elsewhere; and when the Cadet Battalion took up the work as well, a considerable area of the Common near the Rifle Range became highly dangerous for ordinary traffic, especially at night. But no fresh development of training took place worth mentioning.

Incidentally, it may be mentioned that a fine neolithic axehead was turned up outside Haresfoot Park; and quite at the end of the Corps' stay at Berkhamsted, after the Armistice, a large deposit of Roman pottery was brought to light in the neighbourhood of Hill Farm, close to the sphere of operations of the Director of the British Museum, but after his departure.

(4) MAP READING.—Before the war, the use of maps was merely an accessory to Sunday reconnaissance walks or week-ends at Bisley, undertaken by the keener members of the Corps, or to the field operations conducted in the course of the annual camps. It was the same during the early days of the training at Berkhamsted. Field work was an important feature of both Company training and Battalion training; and the use of maps was an essential part of it. Men were required to have maps (the 1-inch uncoloured Ordnance map was the only one generally available), and instruction in the use of them was given incidentally rather than systematically. Owing, however, to the large number of recruits who had little or no previous experience in the use of maps, more methodical training became necessary, and in course of time it became a regular part of the curriculum, to which more and more importance was attached. As time went on, Company examinations in military knowledge were introduced; at first sporadically, then more generally, and in these map-reading took a prominent place; while in 1917 special instruction and examinations in map-reading were made a part of the final course, controlled by the Adjutant, for men who were about to pass from the Corps to a Cadet Battalion.

The following syllabus in use in one Company will indicate the scope of the instruction given. The exact sequence of some of the sections could be varied as convenient.

1. Scales.
2. Variation of compass.
3. Use of protractor.
4. Setting map.
5. Use of squared maps.
6. Conventional signs.
7. Compass: use of prism, setting for night work.
8. Indication of ground features:
 - Spot levels, hachures, layers, contours and form-lines.
 - V.I. and H.E.
 - Salients and re-entrants.
 - Convex and concave slopes.
 - Visibility of points.
9. Map enlargements.

In special cases instruction was given in such subjects as reconnaissance maps, road traverses, panorama sketching, and the like; but these did not form part of the general course.

It will be seen that the primary object of the course was map-reading, not map-making. The latter, except in its roughest and most elementary form, is skilled work, which few officers will be called upon to undertake; the former is part of the essential training of every officer, the importance of which cannot be too much insisted upon. Every officer must be able (1) to find his way about by the help of the map and compass (including the use of the protractor), (2) to read from a contoured map the tactical features of the ground over which he may have to operate. Inquiries in France as to the kind of knowledge desirable for an officer almost invariably elicited answers including an emphatic reference to map-reading; and the two objectives just named were given a prominent place in the training at Berkhamsted.

The method of instruction was necessarily partly theoretical, in the lecture room, with plentiful use of the blackboard (and, in the case of one Company, of apparatus ingeniously designed by a skilful N.C.O.), and partly practical, in the field. The relative proportion of the two methods differed in different Companies, some devoting more time to lectures and some to practical instruction in the field. The results, as tested by examinations and by practical experience, were emphatically in favour of a preponderance of work in the field. A certain amount of preliminary explanation in the lecture room is essential; but the sooner men can be got into the country in small groups, each with a competent instructor, the sooner will they acquire real knowledge. Some men do not like to ask questions at a lecture; some do not take the trouble to do so; some, it is to be feared, slumber; some think they understand when they do not, and none can be said to have an assured grasp of the subject until they have practised it for themselves. Working with small groups, it is possible to cross-question each man, and to make each man take his turn in guiding the group across country, in identifying distant localities, in describing a piece of country from the map before it is reached, in taking a bearing from the map with the protractor, in handling a prismatic compass. Indeed, the use of the compass can only be really taught in small parties. A whole day, or, at the least, half a day, can be profitably spent in taking a company in small groups of eight or ten men over a considerable stretch of country, part at least of which will be unfamiliar to them. Tactical instruction, distance-judging, and a good deal of physical exercise can be combined with the use of the map and compass; and it was found that the majority of the men took great interest in the work and made marked progress in it. During the last year of the war, when a greater use of lectures was prescribed by higher authority, and a much more restricted time was allowed to practice in the field, the results were much less satisfactory.

During the first eighteen months the map in use, as mentioned above, was the 1-inch uncoloured Ordnance map, of which alone a considerable stock was available. The coloured edition, which is much easier to read quickly, was allowed to go out of print, and only a few fortunate individuals possessed copies of it. When, however, the use of squared maps became general in France, it was necessary to accustom recruits to the use of them, and at the same time to familiarise them with the scales which they would find in use when they went abroad. Accordingly, in 1916, by the kind permission of the Director-General of the Ordnance Survey, a special map of the Berkhamsted area was prepared by the well-known map publishers, Messrs. Sifton, Praed & Co., on the scale of 1:40,000, and squared according to the system then in use in France*. The map was produced by photographic enlargement from the Ordnance sheet, the contours being overprinted in red (with approximate form-lines at 50 ft. V.L.). Owing to the enlargement, the contour-lines were necessarily rather large, and the red colour made them conspicuous. For ordinary use this would be something of a defect, but for instructional purposes it was a clear advantage. Many beginners find the reading of contours a stumbling-block, and on the uncoloured Ordnance sheet care and patience are needed to follow them; but the strongly-printed contours of the Berkhamsted map, taken in conjunction with the very well marked features of this undulating country, made the study of the subject a much easier task.

In the last months of the war instruction was begun in the French system of co-ordinates, the use of which had been prescribed in France for the sake of uniformity among the Allied Armies. Negotiations were in progress with the Ordnance Survey for a map of Berkhamsted on this principle, but the Armistice fortunately averted the necessity for its adoption.

(5) MARCHING.—Marching for marching's sake was not much cultivated at Berkhamsted. Route marches were seldom ordered, except when the weather made any other form of work in the open air impossible. But marching as a means of getting to and from work was a not infrequent form of exercise, both in company training and still more in connection with Battalion field operations. During the first two years, as will be shown below, Battalion field days were frequent, and these involved a considerable amount of marching; when Battalion work was reduced, as it was during the last two years, marching was still done by Companies, though this also was limited by time-tables which restricted the hours available for continuous field work.

Route marches were never of excessive length, though sufficient to allow the Company or Battalion to settle down to the routine. The longest, which was only very occasionally undertaken, since it occupied practically the whole day, was that by Ashridge Park, Ringwood, the Beacon, Ivinghoe, and back by Tring or Aldbury, which amounted to about 17 miles; and any impression that this was a great achievement could be corrected by the Company Commander's reminder that this was about half the distance often covered by troops on manœuvres or active service, and that they had been carrying about half the active service load. Nevertheless, it cannot be said that the Corps at Berkhamsted lacked experience in marching, and they showed themselves well able to cover considerable distances with regularity and in good time.

March discipline was inculcated in lectures and observed in practice. The foundation of steady marching is observance of the regulation 120 paces to the minute (which, with the pace slightly more than the regulation length, as is natural with a Corps of this description, works out at not very much less than four miles an hour, excluding halts, on a good surface). This could be practised in Company work as well as when the whole Battalion was together, and could be applied however short the distance to be covered was. Guides were expected to check their step by reference to the watch at frequent intervals, and not to drop the pace more than was inevitable in ascending the hills, which are neither infrequent nor of very easy gradients round Berkhamsted. When a Company has learnt to keep the regulation rate without distress and as a matter of habit, the foundation of good marching is laid, and the actual distance covered will not trouble it, provided the men are in reasonably good training.

March discipline was also observed in the matter of regulated halts and intervals, and, of course, the formation of the column and adherence to the proper side of the road. In one respect the Corps did not come up to the best standards, and that was in singing, which as a rule was spasmodic and none too good. If men would take the trouble to learn the words of songs, and not merely fragments of choruses, singing on the march would be far more inspiring; and it is surprising what a large proportion of men can continue to sing contentedly with the beat on the wrong foot, or will attempt to march to rag-time.

*The idea of this map originated with Capt. Gompertz, Indian Army, then a Company Commander in the Inns of Court Cadet Battalion, and author of the series of articles in Blackwood's Magazine, entitled "Fallen Angels," embodying his experiences in that capacity; author also of the "Compendium Protractor," which many officers found useful.

A few marches probably linger in the recollections of those who took part in them. Such as a march by Gaddesden Row and Studham, in the course of which a forced march of an hour was prescribed, at a pace which was probably only enjoyed by two particularly long-legged Company Commanders. Or a concentration march by Companies to the ridge near Tring Park, facing Drayton Lodge, at which the outer Company, which had the longest route to cover, arrived, led by a distinguished barrister, heated both in body and in mind, at a pace of not much less than five miles an hour, in a gallant attempt to be punctual at the rendezvous. Or, most of all, a march in deep snow (known to some as "the retreat from Moscow") by Tring and Ivinghoe and back over the Beacon; when some active spirits spent the luncheon halt in tobogganing down the sides of the Beacon with no seats other than those with which Nature (and the Government tailor) provided them; and when the Commander of the advance guard at one stage sent a message back that the road was blocked by deep drifts of snow, but nevertheless managed to negotiate them. Whatever may have been the feelings at the time of those whose feet or boots were unsound, "et haec olim meminisse juvat."

(6) FIELD WORK.—Field work held a very high place in the philosophy of our first Commanding Officer. His belief, which was shared by many, at any rate, of his officers was that work in the field is of the utmost value in cultivating the intelligence of the men and instilling into them the qualities required in an officer. The orthodox and safe doctrine is, or at least was, that you must not run until you can walk (a doctrine contrary to the experience of every nursery); that training should for a long time be confined to the barrack square, to extended order drill, and to sealed-pattern attack practice; and that anything in the nature of field operations should be reserved for an advanced stage in training. It may be doubted whether this is sound educational theory at any time, and whether a long adherence to totally unreal conditions may not inculcate habits which are not merely useless but dangerous in real action, and take away the elasticity and resourcefulness which are among the most vital qualities in leaders. Certainly in the conditions under which the Corps was working for the first eighteen months or so, early and frequent resort to field work was essential. Officers were being clamoured for on all sides. Practically no machinery for the training of them existed except in the O.T.C.'s, and of these the University contingents were rapidly depleted through the absence of undergraduates. Until the establishment of Cadet Battalions, in 1916, nearly all the training work, outside the public schools, fell upon the Inns of Court and the Artists. The training was necessarily compressed into a few months to meet the urgent need for officers who should at least possess the rudiments of military knowledge, and it was necessary to adopt those methods which were most likely to develop quickly the qualities required in an officer.

In this respect field work has many advantages. It is interesting, and stimulates the fighting instinct. It helps the beginner to realise the nature of military operations. It gives opportunities, which can be widely extended, for individual initiative, whether as scout or messenger or observer or section or platoon leader. It cultivates an eye for ground. It exercises men in the task of leadership. Leadership is the end and aim of the training of an officer, and real progress in the acquisition of it can only come with actual practice. The lance-corporal who has led a handful of men in a patrol or an attack has begun to acquire the sense of responsibility and of power; and most men dated their conscious progress in an officer's qualities from the time when they first commanded a squad in the field.

Field work, consequently, was assiduously practised during the first two years. Normally there were two battalion field days in each week, apart from night operations (which will be dealt with separately). In addition, each Company practised attack and defence, advance and rearguards, wood fighting, reconnaissance and outposts, in such time as was available, and sometimes Company training took the place of a Battalion day. Battalion training is dealt with in an earlier chapter. Here it is only necessary to say that Battalion days were usually supplemented by Company lectures, in which the operations were described and discussed. It is not sufficient to explain the scheme to the Companies in advance, since much of the course of the operations remains obscure until the dispositions and movements of the two sides have been elucidated and compared. This took place at the officers' and N.C.O.'s pow-wow which immediately followed the operations; and it was the business of the Company officers to take the first opportunity of passing on the information so obtained to their men and of rubbing in the morals to be derived from it. Only so can the men get the full value of Battalion operations, and the combination in due proportions of lectures and field work is one of the chief problems of the training of officers.

Company training in field work was not confined to the exercise of the Company as such. It was also a most valuable instrument for practising the men in command. As the N.C.O.'s gained experience, they were given command of sections or platoons or half companies in field exercises, the officers (and sometimes the senior N.C.O.'s) accompanying them to observe, assist, and subsequently criticise. It is of the essence of such methods that the instructors should not interfere too much, but should allow the pupil to use his own initiative, reserving criticism until the operation is concluded. Sometimes, however, intervention is necessary in order to stimulate the pupil into activity, and to prevent the operation from ending in a fiasco, or from being unduly prolonged. It was not possible to give all men much opportunity of handling troops in the field; but that was the ideal, and the benefit derived from it in developing the qualities of command was universally recognised.

The instruction given was strictly in accordance with the principles laid down in the training manuals, which were used as the text-books for all lectures on tactical principles and methods. The training manuals, however, require amplification and illustration, and for this purpose many an officer pinned his faith on "Haking." The war must have been profitable, in other ways as well as in reputation, to that eminent General. No other handbook was in anything like such demand, or was regarded with such reverent devotion as the Midrash of the inspired text.

There are few parts of the country in a six-mile radius round Berkhamsted which the Inns of Court have not fought over. From Chipperfield to the Beacon, from Gaddesden Row and the Golden Parsonage to Cholesbury and the Danish Camp, all the ground is familiar. All the farms and villages are household words to those who spent their months or years of training there; and Potten End, Little Gaddesden, Nettleden, Hawridge, Haresfoot and Bourne Gutter are the Ypres, Arras, Cambrai and the Somme of their period of tutelage. Never before in England can the armed forces of the Crown have been so free to utilise the whole of a tract of country for the purpose of training; and if fences sometimes got broken, if gates were sometimes left open, if somebody's goat was attacked by one of the many dogs which attached themselves, with touching devotion, to the Corps' operations, if even a local magnate's last shoot on the 28th of February was spoilt, it will not be denied that the country got full value for it on the fields of France and Palestine.

(7) NIGHT OPERATIONS.—It may confidently be asserted that of all experiences connected with the training at Berkhamsted, night operations have left the most indelible memories. The Commanding Officer of the first two years had much faith in their value, and in the importance of familiarising troops with movements at night. Even in peace time they formed a recognised part of week-end programmes at Bisley, and at Berkhamsted they were cultivated with a strenuous energy (not wholly appreciated even by the Regular Adjutant) which earned the respect, but hardly the affection, of all. The programme prescribed one night of Company training and one of Battalion training per week, and no moderate amount of bad weather was allowed to interfere with it. Nor were the operations limited to an hour or two of walking about in the dark. On Company nights, it is true, you might expect to be back in camp on the right side of midnight; but Battalion operations, in the long, dark nights of winter, would begin at 6.30 and last until the small hours of the morning. Hertfordshire is not quite as muddy as Flanders, but the state of uniform and equipment after six or seven hours' wandering over all sorts of country, perhaps ending with a march back along the so-called "broad green track" across the Common, can be imagined by those who have had similar experience; and there was not much spare time to make them respectable before the Battalion parade which followed next (or rather the same) morning.

The elementary training was supposed to be given in the Companies. In them the work was not so far afield, and there was more definite instruction. Plenty of good ground existed in the neighbourhood. There was Kitchener's Field for elementary instruction in sights and sounds by night; for comparing the visibility of extended order, of lines, and of compact masses; for practising getting over fences, and the silent management of equipment. There was Haresfoot Park for practising changes of formation, dispersal and assembly, the ritual of keeping touch between units, and simple patrols or attacks. And there was the Common for movements over broken ground, and for all sorts of attack and outpost schemes. If a deeper shade than mere night was required, there was always Frithsden Beeches, for which some officers were supposed to have a special penchant. Compass marches could be practised anywhere—across the Common, through Frithsden Copse, or around Marlin Chapel and the adjoining Farm (where one straying squad was only discovered by its falling into the farmyard pond, thereby breaking the otherwise strictly observed silence).

Battalion operations carried us much further afield. Ashridge Park offered an endless variety of terrain, and infinite possibilities of losing oneself, especially when the fern was high. Old Park Lodge, which looked so suitable on the map to serve as G.H.Q. for operations in the northern part of the park, acquired an almost legendary notoriety for its elusiveness on a dark night, when all the valleys and folds in the ground seemed to come in different places from those which daylight revealed. It was no infrequent experience to have an attack on an outpost line timed to come off at 11 p.m.; and when allowance is made for the usual delays, for the collection of scattered forces after the fight, and the march back of several miles, it will be realised that it might often be two, or even three a.m. before camp or billet was reached. And always the last person to leave the rendezvous was the Commanding Officer, to whom every unit must report before marching off.

Apart from the more obvious lessons of night work, these Battalion operations were no small test of endurance. Dinner having been at 5 or 5.30, six or seven hours' exercise in the open air afforded a legitimate excuse for hunger; and it is not surprising that Companies could sometimes be located at night by the odour of chocolate or peppermint which surrounded them, or that cocoa or bovril, which many of our kind hosts most liberally provided, were extremely welcome on the return. It was often very cold, and not infrequently very wet, and in the unbroken silence everyone had plenty of time to think how he was enjoying it. Many will remember a long hour's halt on the Common, about midnight or later, on an exposed spot swept by a keen wind, while an unfortunate Second-in-Command searched for a certain narrow path; and how next day we were told that it was very good for our moral; which was perfectly true, but had not struck us so before. But most famous of all was a night, early in the first winter, when, after plunging through inky darkness on the further side of Haresfoot, and miraculously assembling beyond White Hill, the Corps stood in line along the side of a hedge in pouring rain for a mortal hour while the allotted guides, who were to head the advance on compass bearings taken during the day, rectified the errors due to two of them omitting to look at their compasses in the (erroneous) belief that they could find the way without; and to the third having neglected the difference between magnetic and true bearings. It is not surprising that when the attack on Newhouse Farm did come off, the defenders were found so paralysed by cold (or sleep) that nothing but the flashing of electric torches in their faces aroused them to a sense of the presence of their enemy. And the climax (subsequently known as the Retreat from Mons) was the return march, in which the Battalion was led by a confident Company Commander, as we subsequently realised, erroneously, round three sides of a square, through green lanes of an incredible muddiness and of an apparent length which subsequent reference to the Ordnance map did not confirm, before reaching the sound road four miles from home.

But no one will deny the utility of night training. It is of the first importance to get over the unfamiliarity with night sounds and sights which besets the town-bred man, and acquire some practice in finding one's way in the dark. The terrors of the dark disappear with habituation, and many an officer must have laid the foundations at Berkhamsted for the patrols in No-Man's-Land which formed a necessary part of the routine of France and Flanders.

Nor were the conditions always bad. Brilliant starlight nights gave opportunities for elementary instruction in astronomy, and there is a charm of its own in wandering by night through a great park or common. No doubt the officers had the best of it, being more free to regulate their own movements—the umpires and directors most of all; but there must be many who look back with some regret to the strenuous nights of Berkhamsted.

In the later years the glory of night operations declined. Subsequent Commanding Officers had less enthusiasm for them, and Battalion operations ceased to be. Company Commanders kept them up, but on a more restricted scale, and Old Park Lodge knew us no more. Still the attempt was made to familiarise every recruit with movement by night and the practice of night outposts. The last blow was the introduction of Summer time, for in the Summer months night operations were a mockery unless they began about the hour which passed for being 10 p.m., and that involved too great an intrusion on the hours of rest. So that in 1918 the practice of night work softly and silently faded away, not wholly regretted in less austere moments.

(8) BOMBING was, naturally, a development of the war. When the Colonel and one of his officers made a "Cook's tour" in France, in September, 1915, they visited the Bombing School of the Second Army at Cassel. At that time sixteen patterns of bombs were known, of which three were already obsolete. The supremacy of the Mills bomb was already fairly recognised, but it was little known in the front line trenches, where the "cricket ball" and "T and F" grenades (Nos. 6 and 7) seemed to be the commonest. Shortly afterwards, elementary instruction in bombing was begun at Berkhamsted, and many weird objects of the jam-tin nature were thrown (fortunately without explosives) on a pitch near the Potten End water-tower. Instruction was only systematised, and became a serious part of the training, when the Godstone Bombing School was established, and an officer and some N.C.O.'s went there for the course. Thereafter instruction in the mechanism and use of bombs and rifle-grenades was regularly given, and every man threw or discharged a small number of live bombs and rifle-grenades. The training, however, was regimental, and Company officers, though naturally present, were not responsible for it. In the last year of the war, a good range, replete with modern conveniences, was established on the Common, near Frithsden Beeches, and added materially to the risks of life in Berkhamsted. It may be set down to the credit of the instructors that no casualties occurred.

It may be added that the officer in charge of bombing made an almost complete museum of the various patterns of British bombs. Some French and German patterns were included. This collection is now installed in Lincoln's Inn.

(9) GAS.—Anti-gas instruction was taken into the course during the last two years, and every man was taught the ritual of putting on and wearing gas-helmets. A gas-chamber was established on the Common, and all men were passed through it. This also was extra-Company training, a special officer, with a staff of N.C.O.'s, being in charge of it.

(10) LEWIS GUN instruction has been dealt with under musketry. It was given regimentally, under the officer in charge of musketry, and was a popular and well-taught subject, owing much to the efficiency and enthusiasm of the instructors. The tactical combination of rifles, bombs, rifle-grenades and Lewis guns was taught in the Companies, in accordance with the principles laid down in S.S.143.

(11) PHYSICAL TRAINING AND BAYONET FIGHTING.—This was a comparatively late development, as in the Army generally. In the early part of the war, physical training was given in morning runs and the ample allowance of field work, and bayonet fighting was not practised at all. Systematic instruction came later, through the medium of instructors imported from outside, and in the last year or two it occupied an important place in the programme. It may be questioned whether the physical training was not overdone. Some men needed it; but many of the older men found it very exhausting, while the younger ones, fresh from school, hardly required such things as the "organised games." Nor can it be said that the stereotyped jests of the instructors were always edifying for an Officers' Training Corps. The whole subject belongs rather to the training of the man than of the officer, and consequently it acquired most prominence in the last months, when the training of the men as privates occupied the foreground.

Besides the outdoor work, which formed the main staple of the training, lectures played an important part. During the first year they were given under many difficulties, owing to the lack of accommodation. In Summer they could be given out-of-doors, if the weather was propitious; but when shelter was necessary, the Corps possessed no rooms. Halls attached to the Nonconformist Chapels were used in several cases, and the Corps was at one time much indebted to the Y.M.C.A. for leave to use their hut. Other lectures, including Battalion lectures, were given in the large mess-tents, where the Adjutant instructed us in the tactics of the Byzantine army, the type of underclothing most serviceable in the field, and other useful subjects. It was not until the Corps was able, out of the profits of the canteen, to build a large hut for each Company, that lectures were given under really comfortable conditions. Thereafter they formed a regular, instead of spasmodic, feature in the programme. One or two Company lectures a week were prescribed as an essential part of the curriculum, and Battalion lectures were given (after the Battalion had been reduced to something like the strength of a Battalion, instead of approximating to a Brigade) when the C.O. thought fit.

THE COMPANY.

Programmes of lectures were drawn up, but, like most programmes, they were better on paper than in practice. The orderly sequence would be broken up by the sudden intervention of a C.O.'s lecture; or a wet day would involve spending the greater part of the time in-doors, when the stock of lectures would be drawn on. Companies managed their lectures in their own way, but the following list will give some idea of the staple subjects :

History of the war (especially from Mons to the Marne).

Several of the subjects obviously lent themselves to more than a single lecture, and in addition there were the lectures of the specialists on gas, bombs, etc.

Other indoor work included match drill (very useful as a first stage in training men in command, before they are actually put in charge of sections or platoons), knotting and lashing (occasional), and written examinations, which provided a useful check on the impressions of officers as to the progress of their men, and also demonstrated to the men the gaps in their knowledge. Physical exercise could also be practised to some extent indoors, when the weather made it necessary.

From the summary given in the previous pages, it will have been gathered that a distinction can be drawn between the work of the Corps during the first two years of the war and that of the last two years. This is not wholly due to the change of Commanding Officer in September, 1916. A difference in principle was introduced by the institution of Officer Cadet Battalions, which came into effect that year. Previously it was the duty of the Corps to cover the whole ground between the civilian's entry into the Army and his appointment to a commission in a combatant unit. Subsequently he only received the first part of his training in the Corps, from which he passed to an O.C.B. for the completion of his education. The Army, which at first had no system for the training of the mass of officers required for the greatly expanded Territorial Force and the New Army, had now formulated a course of education. More time was available, and many more instructors; and in the last year of the war it even took in hand the training of instructors. Consequently the pressure on the Corps became less; more stress was laid upon the elementary work, and the Corps was more required to work according to a fixed programme.

Under this system the subjects of instruction remained the same, but the distribution of time among them was altered. Field work was considerably reduced. Battalion field days became rare, and ultimately disappeared altogether, except for an occasional day with some of the public schools. Battalion drills were restricted mainly to ceremonial, simple movements, and arms drill. The hours were more strictly parcelled out to the different subjects, which limited the possibilities of distant excursions into the country. Night operations were reduced both in frequency and in duration, and in Summer became almost impossible through the institution of Summer time. Entrenchment was reduced to a minimum, though a good deal of time was spent in the construction of a few elaborate pattern works, with, it is to be feared, only small profit to those concerned in the manufacture. Marching was less attended to as the opportunities for practising it became less.

On the other hand, Company drill retained its full importance. Musketry, though somewhat curtailed in the matter of theory, became more prominent in the practical matters of position, handling of arms, and firing on the range. Map-reading was taught more systematically and with more uniformity. Bombing and gas-training came in as new and important elements. Field work consisted mainly of Company exercises in advance and rearguards, outposts, and attack, including the new formations and tactics introduced in 1918.

In one other respect a difference must also be noted, namely a fuller education in the routine of the internal organisation of both Company and Battalion. It was unquestionably useful to men who were about to become officers in ordinary units to be familiarised with the routine of orderly-room administration. Methods which were quite sufficient for the administration of the Corps in itself did not educate men in the methods required for an ordinary Battalion.

THE COMPANY.

Crime sheets were a novelty to us, with which it was necessary that we should become acquainted; though it is to be feared that Company Commanders never quite came up to the standard expected of them in the production of an adequate supply of criminals.

But with all these changes in the method and details of work, there was, at any rate at first, no change in the underlying principle of the Corps, namely that its duty was to prepare men to be officers. Company Commanders in 1917, as before, still aimed at the training of men in command, and tried to teach them the things which an officer ought to know, and to inspire them with the spirit which an officer ought to have. During the last year, no doubt, increasing stress was laid on the training of men as privates; but it may be hoped that they were never allowed to forget that they were learning to be privates in order that they might learn to be officers.

It would be wrong to conclude this sketch of the principles and methods of Company training at Berkhamsted without reference to one vital element in it, namely the work done by the Company-Sergeant-Majors and Quartermaster-Sergeants. It was not merely that an immense amount of orderly-room work fell upon their shoulders, of which they loyally took the burden, to the relief of the Company Commander; but to them was in great measure due the whole spirit and tone of the Company. A good Sergeant-Major and Quartermaster-Sergeant made a good Company; and no Company Commander can ever forget the debt he owed to the friends and colleagues who served with him in these capacities, and to whom a great part of the credit of the work of the Company is due. The type of Warrant Officer and permanent N.C.O. which the Corps carried on from before the war until its fourth year was an immeasurable source of strength to it and of benefit to the men who served in it.

But it was the Company Officer, and especially the Company Commander, who had the best of everything. High enough in the regimental hierarchy to be in a position of authority and of some independence, yet not so high as to be immersed in regimental organisation and paper work, he enjoyed, more than anyone else, the human side of the training. Company work means companionship, and of that he had the full flavour. Company officers made scores and hundreds of friends among the men who passed through their platoons and companies, and they cherish the hope that these friendships will not be forgotten in after life. It is true that it would require a superhuman memory always to recognise at once, in the mufti of civilian life, men whom one knew for a few months in the not always becoming garb of a private in the days when the Clothing Department was not wholly equal to the demands upon it, and whose expressions have since been changed by the experiences which they have gone through as officers at the Front; but every old officer of the Corps is glad to have recalled to his memory the names of those who served with him at Berkhamsted, and to revive recollections of that time of strenuous preparation for the sterner ordeals which the men who passed through the Corps went away to face, and from which so many of them never returned.

Chapter XII.

THE RANK AND FILE.

What were the chief thoughts, what are the most enduring recollections, of the 12,000 rank and file of the Inns of Court? Can anyone now write these down and not be sure that he is not merely multiplying himself by 10,000? And had not each one of us, however short his stay at Berkhamsted, many "selves" and many "chief thoughts"?

The writer's stay lasted from 1915 to a few months before the Armistice, when he terminated an inglorious career by being "relegated"—a dustbin sort of word—to the Reserve. He thus served under the three C.O.'s and the three R.S.M.'s, and the Adjutants during the period were, as the newspapers say, both numerous and varied. Perhaps the fact of his not attaining commissioned rank throughout this time gave him some advantages in becoming acquainted with the point of view of the rank and file. Broadly speaking, that point of view falls into three periods coinciding with the tenure of the Commanding Officers. The first, by far the most adventurous and still (to the writer) the most vivid of these periods, merged gradually into the second. The last, in this case, is the least.

The dominating figure, for the rank and file, during the first period was undoubtedly that of the Regimental-Sergeant-Major. The C.O. was, of course, both technically and effectively the Commanding Officer, and his influence pervaded the whole Corps. We scanned his face as attentively as the position of attention allowed, to see if the twinkling eye were on parade, and we knew him as the master of the quiet but terribly effective "tick off," as the student of military history who could damn our feeble tactics by an apt quotation from Napoleon, and as the stern (but fair) judge at "Orders." But his presence was (for us) felt rather than seen, while Burns was everywhere. It was he who from the outset gave us, as raw recruits, a really just idea of our unworthiness to be members of the Corps, and of his great and singular condescension in instructing us. It was he who first expounded to us the great truth that although we might (such pranks Fate played) become lieutenants, or even captains and majors, we should not, we could not, become a real R.S.M. His was the voice which spread desolation all over K.'s field, and his the eye that seemed by a fatality to light on us cowering in the rearest of rear ranks on parade, and that perceived in the darkest corner of Charles Street a chilled hand straying into a great coat pocket. But we were proud of him, and if he was not a member of the Corps in the ordinary way, he was at least one "by adoption and grace." And if he affected to set his own valuation at a high figure, let it be placed on record that a fellow-private solemnly assured another that the R.S.M. was a member of the Army Council! He might have been—certainly he was the best representative of the Regular Army that some of us, especially those to whom he imparted the tricks of the trade, ever met, before, during, or after the war.

It is hard to explain the attitude of the rank and file towards those set over them. "Discipline," in the regular Army sense, doesn't suffice. "Affection" sounds inappropriate, though it largely explains the attitude of the learned No. 1 Company to their C.S.M., as well as the feeling which the tumultuous Irish-Lancastrian No. 5 entertained for O'B. Looking back, one recurs again to the overworked expression esprit de corps; we all "belonged," and that is possibly the explanation. Everyone, from C.O. down to the drummer boy, wore the Corps badge, and though perhaps some of us were rather hazy about the functions or the history of the Inns, we were firmly convinced that we were the custodians of a great tradition. The tradition was kept alive up to the end—there was, we knew, a jealous guardian in the Q.M. Store, and another, we suspected, in a more exalted shed, and although we took some of our "attached" folk to our hearts, the presence or absence of our badge was a thing of significance.

The strongest impression of the early days was an extremely pleasant and exhilarating sense of fellowship, a fellowship which, inexplicably perhaps to the Regular Army mind, was compatible with real discipline, and was perhaps the cause of real discipline. We all, from the C.O. down to the newest recruit, "belonged," as the children say. We were all animated by a common purpose, and we all had an intense pride in the Corps; and the things that we had in common were far more potent than the differences, the artificial differences, of rank. A Company officer, his sergeant-major and a lance-corporal could foregather in billets, but this was entirely "without prejudice" to their attitude on parade, and no one watching them there would suspect the relationship. Both on and off parade—and the conduct of troops when not under their officers' eye is the real test of discipline—the right things would be done because we wanted to do them, and we ought to do them; and the wrong things were not done, because "Inns of Court" didn't do such things. There was no need to invoke the penalties of the Army Act or K.R.; we had greater sanctions than these. I do not imply that we were solemn prigs or tame "good boys." There was larking and ragging—of the harmless type—in abundance. Each new lance-jack had to learn that one of the arts of authority is not to be too sensitive to public opinion. Even the great ones were subjected, in the privacy of our tents, to minute and discriminating criticism. There were many versions, more or less humorous, of the proportion which the moral bore to the physical; pointed comments on the value of long route marches in the snow and of our Herculean

THE RANK AND FILE.

"Night Ops," vivid amateur criticisms of our tactical schemes, and parodies of a famous lecture on Discipline. There was plenty of grousing, too, of a good humoured sort, but it was the grousing in which it is the Englishman's privilege to indulge. It was rarely serious and never had the note of real bitterness which came later on.

The training has been dealt with by other hands, but it may be of interest to put on record some impressions from the point of view of the "toad beneath the harrow." To train, in a short time, with miserably insufficient apparatus and few instructors, a vastly swollen Battalion of men to become officers was a formidable task, and the record of the Corps shows how it was accomplished. Our officers and instructors did their share and we did ours, largely by dint of common sense and asking questions. Of the filthiness of gas warfare, I knew (and still know) little. For a long time the material for bombing instructions was limited to cocoa and Swiss-milk tins plugged with earth. It was not until later years that the apparatus for these and kindred "stunts" were doled out by the War Office, and by that time the training was almost entirely the training of private soldiers rather than of officers.

Not that the essentials were neglected. Our drill, for instance, was from beginning to end something to brag about. There was a kind of furious pride in Battalion drill. Violent exertions were required after the dark and strenuous deeds of Friday night, to be ready and clean for the Saturday morning. Then ensued convolutions and evolutions which, as H. used to announce, "recalled the worst excesses of the French Revolution." The Gargantuan Battalion might "drill as a Brigade," or, in extended order, fill K.'s spacious field to overflowing, or wheel itself round and around like a tremendous top, but though we were jig-sawed into patterns that would puzzle a Chelsea course to distraction, everything would come right in the end—how, I don't even now quite understand. By 1918, "C.O.'s Parade" had lost its powers to awe or impress. "The Battalion will drill as a Squad" was the order, and those of us, now "old soldiers" in more than one sense, who looked on from cover on the high ground suave mari magno turbantibus, at the endless "sloping" and "presenting," would grant that the show wasn't bad, but our minds would travel back, and we would recall the splendid crashes that our "D.P.'s," good for little else, would make at "manual," or, as the revised version had it, at "arms exercise."

Of the practical value of our field work I am not in a position to speak at first hand, though more than one old Corps man has told me how he applied with success on the Menin Road or in the fighting at Arras the lessons he learnt at Potten End and Whelpley Hill. Battalion field days we approached as a continual venture. If you had a motor cycle and a job as an orderly, it was a joyous adventure. But even lacking this, there were all kinds of possibilities. You might, for instance, find yourself suddenly placed in command of a section or a platoon or even of a company. Then you learned, in the bitter school of experience, why things went wrong in a battle, the importance of information ("even negative," as the book says), and of keeping in touch, and how terribly exhausting a ten-mile rearguard action might be to heavily laden men, sustained on bread and cheese, and regretting the Corps cake they had thrown away. Certainly one learned things. I recall T. pointing out suavely, but very effectively, that fire orders lustily given and cheerfully acted on were not likely to produce the maximum of results if the sights were not adjusted, and I remember, too (but must not set it down) how my Company Commander lost entirely his anxious Company. Of course, you might more frequently be a mere "man" (as distinguished from an officer), and your lot might be to tramp round the Beacon in the snow or attack it on a boiling Summer day, and in either case your opinion of the training would be tinged with bias. But here again the Gods might be kind, and there are worse things in life than being "reserves" beside a sunny hedge for hours on end, and realizing with no sense of deprivation that you will probably not share the glory of battle. And if you cared, these excursions gave you heaps of practice in comparing the ground with the map, an art which cannot be taught by lectures, and which nearly vanished when our activities became confined entirely to K.'s field, and men spoke of the Monument and Gaddesden as if they were places over the seas.

Wherever two or more old Corps men—I mean men of the first era—get together, the talk will inevitably turn on "Night Ops," and the questions will stream out. Do you remember? Do you remember the night when we were exhorted to "be statuesque": the night when No. 5 (or was it 3 or 4—No. 1 was too well behaved, and it was always safe to charge 5) the night when X (shall we say) started coughing on Northchurch Common; the night (or nights) when we couldn't find the old Park Lodge at Ashridge and swore it must have been moved; the night when an active scout found Sergeant Z not only missing, but engaged in gentle dalliance; the night when you didn't mind being on guard; the nights when the Gods were besought to make the weather impossible, and the nights (too few) when they complied, and triumphant howls went up from the mess sheds? This is the type of question which is asked and answered and capped with another. The terrors of "Night Ops" were instilled into us at the dépôt, and by the old hands when we arrived. (The old hands, by the way, "went sick"—or tried to—"in large numbers" on Friday mornings.) Were they really terrible? One man I know, once said he liked them, but as he liked guards too, he was merely regarded as eccentric. For some, the fortunate few who could sleep soundly in a dry ditch on the coldest of cold nights, the hardship was relatively slight. Boredom was, I suppose, their chief characteristic for us of the rank and file—the boredom of forsaking a warm fire and a pipe, to be marched off, we knew not whither, to perform we knew not what (for the "scheme" rarely trickled in an intelligible form, below the Section Commanders). And what aggravated the burden was the fact that we couldn't even grouse! (The coughing fit at Northchurch was, I suspect, the consequence of a suppressed grouse.) We admitted, of course, that it was to the credit of the C.O. that he himself always turned out, though we thought that such devotion to duty was possibly a little too heroic. We knew, too, that he attached high importance to the training, less on account of its instructional than for its moral value. We almost admitted that he might be right. But still

THE RANK AND FILE.

In retrospect we can admit that "Night Ops" had an educational value. They comprised all that the books had said of the difficulties of manoeuvres in the dark. They taught this and more. How difficult to find at 1 p.m. the "i" of Grim's Ditch (G.26.d.3020); the nocturnal habits of the fauna of Ashridge; the close resemblance of a cigarette-end to a glow-worm; the places where it was inadvisable to lie down—these are some of them. D, whose knowledge of astronomy was aforesaid deplorably weak, confessed that it was at Friday Street Farm that the great truth first flashed into his brain that "the stars go round." Many learned the virtues of black peppermints for the first time.

Striking as were the topsy-turvy conditions brought about by the war, in no other regiment could the elements have been more strangely mixed. It goes without saying that the law was well represented, and it is not surprising that a barrister Corporal of several years' standing would find himself saluting a junior recently called (but whom his company deemed as K.C.). There cannot have been many R.Q.M.S. in the Army who amused themselves with turning K.R. into iambs or sergeants who quoted In Catilinam to clumsy recruits, but they flourished at Berkhamsted. It was embarrassing, until you got into the way of it, to instruct an eminent mathematician on the meaning of trajectory and observe his puzzled look as you "explained" the drift of the bullet; to initiate a surveyor into the mysteries of the Ordnance map was also a task requiring courage, but it was done, and discipline did not suffer. This galaxy of talent would in normal times have played havoc with the scheme of things; surely never before were official regulations scrutinised with such keenness, or their diction, or their meaning, criticised so acutely. Our meanest logician could show that a regulation was capable of any interpretation you pleased, and that to carry it out, as written, violated the law of contradictions; our mathematical sergeant made hay of the arithmetical explanations set out in manuals. Our accomplishments were not, however, all employed to such purposes. I have known lance-corporals who whiled away wet days of musketry with marvellous card tricks ("and with such tiny hands"). S, his malodorous duties done, seated on a box, would play rag-time in a way that really justified its invention. Our professional singers and actors gave us their best things and received in return admiration never excelled at the Queen's Hall or the West End theatres. I knew but one ventriloquist, and that was enough. He severely compromised the discipline of two platoons before he was discovered, and the number of undeserved reprimands of which he was the cause, made him unpopular. Our Mess Steward, too, was unique. How Mr. and Mrs. Daborn dealt with the needs of the roaring multitude of 1915 was, and remains, a miracle, though perhaps not so much of one as the skill with which they manipulated, in the lean days, the eternal diet of rabbits and dubious sausages, or with which they charmed peppery Brigadiers with subtle advocacy, both verbal and culinary. Many guards must hold their memory dear.

Most of what I have written has been concerned with what I call the first period. The second (or transitory) period, though lacking the sense of adventure of the first, was pleasant in its way. There was a good deal of the momentum of our traditions carried on to it, as we were now, in a sense, the "spoiled darlings" of the War Office. Apparatus was plentiful, our numbers were manageable, and though our field work was much more modest in its scope, we fared abroad over a rather limited area. Our pleasures were organized as thoroughly as our work; our Company sing-songs gave way to arranged concerts and plays, and our Band played us to and from church. The feverish activity in the polishing of leather is perhaps one of the significant symbols of this time. An extremely clipped fashion in hair was another.

Of the last period I do not feel that I want to say much. I was detached most of the time for special work and got somewhat out of touch. The Corps went marching on. The recruits were younger now, and most of the old hands had gone, but on the whole, and in spite of difficulties, the traditions of the Corps persisted. There was still nothing quite like the Devil's Own. With the youngsters came some older men, and it was one of these who slightly irritated us by his complaint of our messing arrangements. He, it was, too, who asked for his batman, and when one (an attached C.S.M.) was indicated, received a liberal education in the vigorous use of the mother tongue as well as an introduction to non-classical Hindustani.

"Berko" has now reverted to its position of a quiet country town—so quiet that one of its most famous residents who took up his abode during our stay, declares that he was lured there under false pretences. Many of the military tailors who supplied convertible tunics, and the other necessities of dandy subs have vanished. The genial artist who posed many squads and camp parties before the camera, now exhibits studies of bird, and beast, and flower; and the "King's Hipe" is now monopolised by motorists. All the scars in K.'s field have long healed and pheasants strut about where the old "Instrucker" had its great fights in the snow. Only on the Common are the visible remnants of trenches and dug-outs, and these will soon go unless, as a sort of "Grim's Ditch," they remain to puzzle local antiquaries in centuries to come. An old Corps man will come away with mixed feelings from the old scenes, for our "Roll of Honour" is a long one. But it was a great privilege to be a member of the Inns of Court, and to have known such men as we had.

"Bedridden," originally contributed by Mr. W. W. Jacobs to the "Hades Herald" of August, 1916, and reproduced by his kind permission.

July 12, 1915.—Disquieting rumours to the effect that the epidemic of Billetitis, hitherto confined to the north of King's Road, shows signs of spreading.

July 14.—Report that two Inns of Court men have been seen peeping over my gate.

July 16.—Informed that soldier of agreeable appearance and charming manners requests interview with me. Took a dose of Phospherine and went. Found composite photograph of French, Joffre, and Hindenburg waiting for me in the hall. Smiled (he did, I mean) and gave me the mutilated form of salute reserved for civilians. Introduced himself as Quartermaster-Sergeant Beddem*, and stated that the Inns of Court O.T.C. was going under canvas next week. After which he gulped. Meantime could I take in a billet. Questioned as to what day the Corps was going into camp, said that he believed it was Monday, but was not quite sure—might possibly be Tuesday. Swallowed again and coughed a little. Accepted billet and felt completely rewarded by smile. Q.M.S. bade me good-bye, and then with the air of a man suddenly remembering something, asked me whether I could take two. Excused myself and interviewed my C.O. behind the dining-room door. Came back and accepted. Q.M.S. so overjoyed (apparently) that he fell over the scraper. Seemed to jog his memory. He paused, and gazing in absent fashion at the topmost rose on the climber on the porch, asked whether I could take three! Added hopefully that the third was only a boy. Excused myself. Heated debate with C.O. Subject: Sheets. Returned with me to explain to the Q.M.S. He smiled. C.O. accepted at once, and, returning smile, expressed regret at size and position of bedrooms available. Q.M.S. went off swinging cane jauntily.

July 17.—Billets arrived. Spoke to them about next Monday and canvas. They seemed surprised. Strange how the military authorities decline to take men into their confidence merely because they are privates. Led them upstairs. They went (for first and last time) on tiptoe.

July 18.—Saw Q.M.S. Beddem in the town. Took shelter in the King's Arms.

Aug. 3.—Went to Cornwall.

Aug. 31.—Returned. Billets received me very hospitably.

Sept. 4.—Private Budd, electrical engineer, dissatisfied with appearance of bell-push in dining-room, altered it.

Sept. 5.—Bells out of order.

Sept. 6.—Private Merited, also an electrical engineer, helped Private Budd to repair bells.

Sept. 7.—Private Budd helped Private Merited to repair bells.

Sept. 8.—Privates Budd and Merited helped each other to repair bells.

Sept. 9.—Sent to local tradesman to put my bells in order.

Sept. 15.—Told that Q.M.S. Beddem wished to see me. Saw C.O. first. She thought he had possibly come to take some of the billets away. Q.M.S. met my approach with a smile that reminded me vaguely of picture-postcards I had seen. Awfully sorry to trouble me, but Private Montease, just back from three weeks' holiday with bronchitis, was sleeping in the wood-shed on three planks and a tin-tack. Beamed at me and waited. Went and bought another bedstead.

Sept. 16.—Private Montease and a cough entered into residence.

Sept. 17, 11.45 p.m.—Maid came to bedroom-door with some cough lozenges which she asked me to take to the new billet. Took them. Private Montease thanked me, but said he didn't mind coughing. Said it was an heirloom: Montease cough, known in highest circles all over Scotland since time of Young Pretender.

Sept. 20.—Private Montease installed in easy-chair in dining-room with touch of bronchitis, looking up trains to Bournemouth.

Sept. 21.—Private Montease in bed all day. Cook anxious "to do her bit" rubbed his chest with home-made embrocation. Believe it is some stuff she rubs chests in hall with. Smells the same anyway.

Sept. 24.—Private Montease, complaining of slight rawness of chest, but otherwise well, returned to duty.

Oct. 5.—Cough worse again. Private Montease thinks that with care it may turn to bronchitis. Borrowed an A.B.C.

Oct. 6.—Private Montease relates uncanny experience. Woke up with feeling of suffocation to find an enormous black-currant and glycerine jujube wedged in his gullet. Never owned such a thing in his life. Seems to be unaware that he always sleeps with his mouth open.

*Q.M.S. Redden, of No. 2 Company, for 20 years a member of the Corps

THE BILLET.

Nov. 14.—Private Bowser, youngest and tallest of my billets, gazetted.

Nov. 15, 10.35 a.m.—Private Bowser in tip-top spirits said good-bye to us all.

10.45.—Told that Q.M.S. Beddem desired to see me. Capitulated. New billet, Private Early, armed to the teeth, turned up in the evening. Said that he was a Yorkshireman. Said that Yorkshire was the finest country in England, and Yorkshiremen the finest men in the world. Stood toying with his bayonet and waiting for contradiction.

Jan. 5, 1916.—Standing in the garden just after lunch was witness to startling phenomenon. Q.M.S. Beddem came towards front-gate with a smile so expansive that gate after first trembling violently on its hinges swung open of its own accord. Q.M.S., with smile (sad), said he was in trouble. Very old member of the Inns of Court, Private Keen, had rejoined, and he wanted a good billet for him. Would cheerfully give up his own bed, but it wasn't long enough. Not to be outdone in hospitality by my own gate, accepted Private Keen. Q.M.S. digging hole in my path with toe of right boot, and for first and only time manifesting signs of nervousness, murmured that two life-long friends of Private Keen's had rejoined with him. Known as the Three Inseparables. Where they were to sleep, unless I——. Fled to house, and locking myself in top-attic, watched Q.M.S. from window. He departed with bent head and swagger-cane reversed.

Jan. 6.—Private Keen arrived. Turned out to be son of an old Chief of mine. Resolved not to visit the sins of the father on the head of a child six feet two high and broad in proportion.

Feb. 6.—Private Keen came home with a temperature.

Feb. 7.—M.O. diagnosed influenza. Was afraid it would spread.

Feb. 8.—Warned the other four billets. They seemed amused. Pointed out that influenza had no terrors for men in No. 2 Company, who were doomed to weekly night ops. under Major Carryon.

Feb. 9.—House strangely and pleasantly quiet. Went to see how Private Keen was progressing, and found the other four billets sitting in a row on his bed practising deep-breathing exercises.

Feb. 16th.—Billets on night ops. until late hour. Spoke in highest terms of Major Carryon's marching powers—also in other terms.

March 3.—Waited up until midnight for Private Merited, who had gone to Slough on his motor-bike.

1.5 a.m.—Awakened by series of explosions from over-worked, or badly-worked, motor-bike. Put head out of window and threw key to Private Merited. He seemed excited. Said he had been chased all the way from Chesham by a pink rat with yellow spots. Advised him to go to bed. Set him an example.

1.10 a.m.—Heard somebody in the pantry.

2.10 a.m.—Heard Private Merited going upstairs to bed.

2.16 a.m.—Heard Private Merited still going upstairs to bed.

2.20-3.15 a.m.—Heard Private Merited getting to bed.

April 3, 12.30 a.m.—Town-hooter announced Zeppelins and excited soldier called up my billets from their beds to go and frighten them off. Pleasant to see superiority of billets over the hooter: that only emitted three blasts.

12.50 a.m.—Billets returned with exception of Private Merited, who was retained for sake of his motor-bike.

9 a.m.—On way to bath-room ran into Private Merited, who, looking very glum and sleepy, inquired whether I had a copy of the "Exchange and Mart" in the house.

10 p.m.—Overheard billets discussing whether it was worth while removing boots before going to bed until the Zeppelin scare was over. Joined in discussion.

May 2.—Rumours that the Inns of Court were going under canvas. Discredited them.

May 5.—Rumours grow stronger.

May 6.—Billets depressed. Begin to think perhaps there is something in rumours after all.

May 9.—All doubts removed. Tents begin to spring up with the suddenness of mushrooms in fields below Berkhamsted Place.

May 18, LIBERATION DAY.—Bade a facetious good-bye to my billets; response lacking in bonhomie.

May 19.—House delightfully quiet. Presented caller of unkempt appearance at back-door with remains of pair of military boots, three empty shaving-stick tins, and a couple of partially bald tooth-brushes.

May 21.—In afternoon went round and looked at camp. Came home smiling, and went to favourite seat in garden to smoke. Discovered Private Early lying on it fast asleep. Went to study. Private Merited at table writing long and well-reasoned letter to his tailor. As he said he could never write properly with anybody else in the room, left him and went to bath-room. Door locked. Peevish but familiar voice, with a Scotch accent, asked me what I wanted; also complained of temperature of water.

May 22.—After comparing notes with neighbours, feel deeply grateful to Q.M.S. Beddem for sending me the six best men in the Corps.

July 15.—Feel glad to have been associated, however remotely and humbly, with a Corps, the names of whose members appear on the Roll of Honour of every British regiment.

Chapter XIV.

CONCLUSIONS.

There is no deep mystery about the training of an officer. As in all other professions, his training must have relation to the object in view. To be successful at the Bar, a man requires self-confidence, the art of self-production, a good memory, and quick assimilation. Success, in one branch at least of the medical profession, needs much the same qualities, though, I understand, some knowledge of medicine is almost indispensable. In neither profession is much attention paid during the preliminary training to these necessary attributes, and consequently there are many failures; but in such case, speaking generally, failure only involves the man himself. In the military profession, failure is paid for in the lives of others, and, except in the higher military circles, spurious qualities and attainments crumble at the acid test of war. The object, therefore, of an officer's training must necessarily be to equip him mentally and physically to play his part in the realities of war, and for this purpose it is indispensable to consider the men he will have to command.

Perhaps the most curious feature of the late war was the psychology of the British, and particularly the English soldier. Though drawn from different classes, he maintained his traditional virtues and weaknesses. His furious tenacious courage was beyond all praise, and really saved our share in the war from failure; but he was more formidable in defence than in attack, and required a lot of leading. In no previous war was he so well looked after; he repaid it by his exemplary behaviour, which, located as he mostly was in a friendly country, proved of the greatest possible value to the allied cause.

Of conscious patriotism he showed little trace: his astounding moral was founded on the incomprehensibility of his being really beaten. I believe the key to his strength as to his weakness to be the comparatively large amount of individual liberty, implying a developed sense of justice which we have for many centuries enjoyed in this country. Defence or retirement leaves a good deal to the individual, and there he is strong; attack requires intelligent concerted action, and there he is weak. To be beaten means either that the other man has a better case, or that you are being unjustly treated. The British soldier resents, and will not admit defeat, because he can not imagine himself in the wrong, and it seems to him unjust that he should be so treated. Purely as a soldier, he may be inferior to the better educated German, and the more quick-witted Frenchman, but in moral he is supreme; and, fortunately for us, the war developed into a struggle in moral. Still he is difficult to command in modern war, and will remain so until the general standard of education is considerably raised: he needs both actual leading and much looking after, matters often incompatible with command. While, therefore, the capacity to control, which means character, must always take the foremost place in the training of an officer, the capacity to direct, which means knowledge, has to be exercised under peculiar difficulties, and therefore requires a high development.

Putting aside patriotic prejudice, we have little reason to be satisfied with our share in the late war. Germany, blockaded by sea and fighting on two fronts against armies superior in man power and material, more than held her own for nearly four years, brought Russia to its knees, and finally succumbed in a contest of moral. We had the more dependable allies, and during some two years had on the Western Front a large superiority in men and guns. Owing to sea power the whole strategic field was open to us, and frontal attacks in the west were in no way imposed on us as on Germany. Yet we were within almost a few yards of losing the war, and our triumph only came when America threw her gigantic shadow over the arena, and the German moral snapped. Given our superiority we ought to have won the war in 1916 or 1917, and certainly should not have nearly lost it in 1918. To blame the politicians is merely to raise a smoke cloud; the men and material were there, clearly the officers were the real cause of failure, and in this connection the regular officer, occupying as he did all the higher posts, cannot escape the greater blame.

There must be something lacking in the training of our regular officers to account for our non-success in civilised warfare. No one can look back to the Crimea, or the South African war as instances of successful leading or command; in both we muddled through after a disproportionate expenditure of men and money. We have done the same again, and with a very narrow margin of safety. The root of the evil is, perhaps, the national distrust of theory. Instead of founding ourselves on sound doctrine, or thinking things out beforehand, we prefer to learn by experience, and in modern war the price is becoming prohibitive. Never again are we likely to be able to use men and money so lavishly, or to proceed so leisurely in learning war first in the field. Excuses will always be made, and it is said that the new officer, and not the regular officer, was at fault. It is sufficient, however, to take the first months of the war, while the regular army was practically alone in the field; a regular army of long-service men, most of whose officers had some war experience, confronted by a much more numerous army, but composed of men of two years' service, and officered by officers of no war experience at all. Apart from the bravery shown by all ranks, there is not much matter for military satisfaction either in the retreat through a friendly and fertile country in summer weather, or the return from the Marne. So far as can be ascertained at present, they leave a general impression of want of grip and concerted action, combined with the over-confidence in ourselves and the under estimation of both the enemy and our allies which have become almost the hall-mark of the British Army.

The best sort of British regular officer is of the salt of the earth, but it is doubtful whether he does not become so in spite of, and not as the result of, his training. He is caught young, and at Sandhurst is licked into shape, in his regiment he is further licked into shape, and from that day he leads the life of his regiment, and not his own; the amount of serious work he does, his amusements, his social relations, even his modes of expression are all in fact governed by his regiment. Within the four corners of that life he can move so easily that he does not realise its limitations, and he becomes a creature of routine in the wider sense without knowing it. The results, too apparent in the late war, are a lack of real discipline, by which I mean self-control when the regimental pressure has ceased; the absence of any public conscience, which was one of the causes of the incredible waste that prevailed; and a certain readiness to stagnate in professionalism rather than learn from without.

It was in ethics he failed, really in ability to rise to the occasion. It must be remembered, however, that modern war, as we waged it, means the survival of the unfittest; and the regular officer was generally placed in positions far above those he would have normally occupied. Of officers who seriously study their profession, whether at the Staff College or elsewhere, there were not enough to go round. The ordinary officer, though he works harder than before the South African War, does not study the theory of his profession, or the teaching and practice of other armies; he makes a good Company officer as regards the care and training of his men, but in more responsible positions he is not on the heights, and his training should be the first matter to be taken into account in any re-organisation of the regular Army. It seems worthy of question whether he should not be taken in older, and whether a University degree in special subjects might not usefully take the place of Sandhurst. Possibly even his exclusively regimental life might be modified. It is dangerous to question the sanctity of the military domestic hearth, and no one doubts the importance of esprit de corps; but even esprit de corps, supremely important as it is, can only be a means to an end, and it has rather tended to become an idol in itself. No doubt the present system has many advantages, particularly in view of our numerous small wars; it gives us a virile type of officer, well qualified to get the best in bravery out of the class of man who joins the regular Army, and to impose his personality on native troops; it is not a system to be hastily changed, or even amended without a great deal of thinking, and it is only dealt with here because the training of the regular officer re-acts on the Territorial, and new officer: what he is, they inevitably try to become.

So far as the new officer was concerned in the late war, he had little chance of properly qualifying himself for commanding men. During some months men of the normal officer class were encouraged to join the ranks; then as the new armies came into being, men were almost literally swept in as officers through every alley; at last, as it became evident that the old officer class, and even the better educated class had been exhausted, the final and desperate step had to be taken of general promotion from the ranks, in the hope that the good men who had been thrown in might be fished out. Unfortunately, the platoon and even the company commander is human, and is rarely willing to give up his most useful men for the benefit of others. Pulled out of the ranks, the new officer obviously needed training that would free him from its cramping influence; he was sent, however, to a cadet school, where he again paced the equivalent to the barrack yard, learnt the new drill*, and was instructed how to behave at mess. He was then hurried from course to course, and was sent rather bewildered to a regiment to take in his charge the lives of men. He would, in my belief, have been better qualified to do so if he had been given the training in moral and initiative which our system provided.

The Territorial officer was in many ways a success: he knew something as a rule of military routine, which in its proper place is an essential factor in making the war machine run smoothly; he generally had the spirit of discipline, and had often done a good deal of military reading; above all he was keen. His weakness lay perhaps in his inequality.

Every regular regiment is of the same pattern, the officers have had the same training, and as to all routine matters can be trusted to do things in the same way; their minimum standard of knowledge is also roughly the same. The Territorial regiment was and remained a more unknown, and therefore in the regular's opinion, a more uncertain quantity; its officers could not be relied on to do the same things as the regular officer, or in the same way. Their keenness was mistaken for empty enthusiasm, the badge of the amateur; and I have heard a regular officer say, and have understood his point of view, that he would rather have under him the worst regular than the best Territorial.

The conclusions to be drawn from the late war are, I think, that it is impossible to force the nation in arms into the framework of our small regular Army. Such an attempt not only leads to huge waste even in matters of pay and allowances (witness the hundred pages of staff jobs in our war Army Lists), but it blights and rules out the spirit of individual enterprise, that is the breath of successful civilian life. The civilian character is bricked in while there is no time to build up over it the sealed pattern military character. Modern war needs the highest qualities of the mind, disciplined self-control, power to think and power to act. It is not enough for the regular officer to train for the regular Army and small wars, he must be prepared to hold his own both in character and knowledge with a wider circle; if he accepts responsibility he must bear criticism, and it is to be hoped that national self-complacency is only a passing phase, and that the preparation of the regular officer for modern war will soon become a matter of real concern.

*What importance was attached to the new drill is shown by the fact that in February, 1917, in common with other Commandants of Brigade Schools, I was ordered to attend the School of Instruction at Chelsea Barracks for two days to discuss with the Commandant the exact construction to be placed on the amended "turnings": "to jump or not to jump," that was the question!

CONCLUSIONS.

With regard to the new officer, the circumstances are not likely to recur. It is generally acknowledged that the new armies should have been organised as part of the Territorial force; and, after the lesson we have had, the want of policy that led to wholesale promotion from the ranks is not likely to recur.

The Territorial officer will be the mainstay of the expanded Army, and his training is of supreme importance. At the present moment practically every officer has seen service in the late war. So far as running the domestic show on war lines is concerned, such experience is of the utmost value; but from the point of view of the higher efficiency, it has its dangerous side. The so-called lessons of one war are no guide how to win the next, but only how best to avoid losing it; they are purely negative. The principles of success are well-known, but the method of their application differed widely in the last war from previous wars, and will differ again in the next. The danger of experience is to stereotype previous methods. An officer should know instinctively, and quite decidedly the right thing to do, and have the will to do it, but keep an open mind as to the means; however great an officer's previous experience has been, he is an amateur when a new war begins. Nor did officers have in the late war such a common experience as might have its use in forming a common consciousness; experience in most cases was only an experience in varying details. Such experience is of no value in forming a common body of doctrine, and so long as Territorial officers have no homogeneous training, or common standard of knowledge, the magnificent material in the ranks will be liable to be wasted. Yet there is all the time an instrument at hand framed for the purpose, and of proved value, the Officers' Training Corps.

The simple and logical way to obtain an even standard of training is for every Territorial officer before being commissioned to pass through an O.T.C. For this purpose their number should be increased, if possible, to one in each large command, and the standard of teaching maintained at a high level. The instructors should be chosen not so much because of their experience in the late war, as of their ability to envisage the next. If both can be combined so much the better, but in training officers a pinch of sound theory is worth a peck of practice. Some part of the expense might be met by abolishing the School O.T.C.'s and the University O.T.C.'s as such, while using the University towns as centres for O.T.C. training. They did excellent work during the war, but as part of a general scheme they come at the wrong time, and must fail in uniformity. Public schools teach discipline without any military adjunct; their O.T.C.'s cannot reproduce regimental life, they tend to give boys the idea that nothing further is required and they are really an excrescence on school life. The same applies to University O.T.C.'s. A boy goes to the University to play hard, and in his spare time to read hard; at the most the O.T.C. is another game in fashion or not in fashion, and is really a non-natural side of University life. Soldiering should be part of the serious business of life, and taken up at the same time, and with the same keen and resolute spirit as life's more permanent issues. Nor is it then a disturbing or inharmonious factor. An Officers' Training Corps, carried on in the proper spirit, toughens the character and widens the intelligence. Far from interfering with his career, the man who joins it will find himself a more capable civilian as he becomes a better soldier.

So far as methods of training are concerned, I believed at the time that the methods employed by the Corps during the first two years of the war, though, of course, much improveable in details, were on the right lines, at least as regards men of the age of the ordinary Territorial or new officer. Since I have seen the war at rather closer quarters, I feel no doubt about it. Our theory of training can be gathered from the previous chapters. It may thus be summarised: First, and all the time, to build up moral by constant exercises in self-control, and in self-reliance, fostered by strict discipline, not of the repressive type, but founded on esprit de corps, and inculcated by N.C.O.'s of the same class as the officers and men. Secondly, by lectures, formal and informal, and, so far as possible, by exercises in the field; to interest men in war, and to give them such a grip of its unchanging general principles that they may contemplate every problem from a common standpoint of theory. The teaching of drill, musketry, map-reading, and the rapid recognition of ground fit in of themselves. Real knowledge of war must be self-taught. The object of training in this respect is to form and stimulate the taste. When a man leaves an O.T.C. morally stronger, and intellectually keener, than when he entered, his training has been a success. This test we, I believe, satisfied. Although two years were allowed to elapse before restarting the Corps, it is now again launched under much the same conditions as heretofore. The Corps has, as these records bear witness, a proud past; that it may have a future useful to the country, and honourable to itself is the fervent wish of all who have had the honour and happiness of serving in its ranks.

Preface to Appendix II.

The following Appendix contains the names of all members of the Corps who joined after the formation of the Territorial Force in 1908. At the outbreak of war the total number had only reached 809, of whom nearly all served during the war, and it is for this reason that they are included. Regimental Numbers were granted consecutively throughout the war, and the last number issued was 14,349.

To give some idea of the growth of the Corps: before the end of 1914, 1725 new members had joined; during 1915, 6013 were added to the ranks. During 1916 recruiting was more or less suspended from February to September and consequently this year only gave an increase of 1721. In 1917 we had 2069 recruits, and from the beginning of 1918 to the end of the war, 2012. The greatest recruiting month throughout the whole war was November 1915, when 956 men were attested or transferred to the Corps; and during one day of this month no less than 115 men were brought on the strength of the Corps.

Of these, 11485 were granted commissions; 1065 were transferred to the ranks of other units (this includes, of course, a very large number who were serving in the Corps when the Armistice was signed and who were not eligible for immediate demobilisation); 929 were demobilised direct from the Corps; 341 were discharged as medically unfit.

It has not been possible definitely to ascertain the extent of the casualties suffered by ex-members of the Corps, but at the time of going to press the following figures are known:—

Died whilst serving in the Corps	35
Killed in action, Died of wounds, Killed accidentally or died of disease	2147
Wounded (5 times)	1
„ (4 „)	6
„ (3 „)	50
„ (twice)	366

PREFACE TO APPENDIX II.

Wherever possible the present addresses of ex-members are given in the following pages. In a large number of cases letters have been returned through the Dead Letter Office of the Post Office. Every attempt has been made to trace these through the War Office, Cox & Co. and other agents, and this very often proved successful. When no reply was received through these sources, the address has been omitted altogether. However, if an address is not definitely known to be a wrong one, although we have received no response to letters sent there, it is included in the hope that others may be more successful than we have been. The addresses of the next-of-kin of those who died have not been inserted, but many of these are known and can be obtained, if desired, from Headquarters.

The scheme that has been adopted for the members' Records needs a little explanation.

The first set of letters and figures and a date, with sometimes a rank, indicate the company or companies in which the man served, his Regimental Number, the date he joined and the highest rank he held in the Corps if he gained non-commissioned rank. Next appears the number or name of Cadet Unit to which the man was sent, after these units had been formed in the spring of 1916. The Regiment to which he was commissioned and the date is next (where the name of a Regiment appears with a date afterwards it means in all cases that the man was commissioned to the Regiment with the rank of 2nd Lieutenant on that date. The Regiments shown after the date are those in which the man subsequently served). If a man was transferred from the Corps to another Regiment without obtaining a commission, this is always shown as: trfr. Manch. R. etc. Should he have received a commission subsequently in another Regiment, this will be shown in the usual way. The front on which he served is next given, after which comes wounds or other casualties, and lastly, Honours, Mentions in Dispatches, etc.

The following is an example of a man's Record as it will appear in subsequent pages:—

ROBINSON, John Hugh

3/D/Sq/3942, 5/5/15, Cpl.: No. 9 O.C.B., 8/3/16; Arg. & Suth'd. Highrs., 16/6/16, Manch. R., att. R.A.F.; F.E.P; Major; w(2), g,p; D.S.O., A.F.C., M(3). 33 Milestone Avenue, Wigan. (Now in FMS).

From this his career can be traced as follows:—Joined the Corps 5/5/15, Regimental Number 3942, served in 3 and "D" Companies and the Squadron, and attained the rank of Corporal in the Corps; went to No. 9 Officer Cadet Battalion on the 8th March 1916 and was commissioned to the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders on the 16th June 1916. He subsequently served with the Manchester Regiment and was attached to the Royal Air Force. He served overseas in France, Egypt and Palestine and attained the rank of Major. He was wounded twice, gassed and taken prisoner; was awarded the D.S.O. and the Air Force Cross and was thrice mentioned in Dispatches. His permanent address in this country is at Wigan and he is now in the Federated Malay States.
